Talking 14,000 Miles. What Idleness Means. Poor Old Confucius. Says Mr. Coolidge.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

YOU MAY NOW talk to your friend in Australia price $45 for three minutes.

The telephone company announces approaching reductions in long distance rates generally which should increase gross and net receipts and profits, stimulating use and encouraging business, by bringing all Americans closer together.

THIS WRITER talks from an office in New York to a ranch on the edge of the Pacific Ocean with absolute ease and clearness, whereas it is necessary to walk into the next room to speak to the assistant transcribing this from the phonograph.

The link with Australia, longest ever established, 14,000 miles, is made through the air with the co-operation of the British and Australian post-offices, which seem to think they can run a telephone business.

When will the next step come, wireless through the ether to a nearby planet? And what will they tell us?

YOU REALIZE what the earnings of workmen amount to in industry, business and prosperity, when you consider efforts to relieve unemployment.

There are undoubtedly four million men idle, and many more.

Four millions, allowing for each man earning only $4 a day, three hundred days a year, would amount to $4,800,000,000 a year.

Even on the "dole" basis of $5 a week, the annual bill would come to one billion and forty million dollars.

No wonder our "best financial minds" want to avoid the dole, which would have to be added to taxation.

IF YOU SHOULD open the grave of Confucius, and find the venerable gentleman turning rapidly in his grave, you would know that he saw this dispatch from Shanghai:

"Chiang Kai-Shek, president of China, has turned Christian, and was baptized a member of the Methodist Church by the Rev. Z. Kuang."

It is a triumph for Methodism, a disappointment, perhaps, for the Catholic Church, which spreads Christianity through China hundreds of years before Methodism started.

It is surely a blow to Russia's hopes of using China in her business. Methodists are not Bolsheviks or "Reds."

CHINA HAS welcomed and followed many religions, from the lofty, philosophical teachings of Confucius, to the vilest forms of superstition.

Whether the president's conversion means a gradually Christianized China, or simply an Oriental tribute to the success of the West, it is important and interesting.

CALVIN COOLIDGE says a political campaign is a helpful process for a self-governing people, because "it will develop the weak points of the governmental and economic structure."

It has been developing some interesting weak points in the biggest city, New York, including the fact that some magistrates, and judges, buy seats on the bench, and proceed to get back their money by protecting racketeers, murderers and bootleggers.

THE INTERESTING economic fact is revealed that some of the courts were used to blackmail miserable women, arresting them on trumped up charges, and extorting money under fear of exposure.

The charge alone would disgrace them for life, regardless of conviction, or guilt.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB says a "record boom" is approaching.

An ordinary boom, such as we had a year ago, would satisfy the average man. Many predictions of returning prosperity have turned out to be descriptions of mirages. The people are tired of the Dr. Coue prosperity, with its "every day, in every way, we are getting better and better."

L. J. HOROWITZ, head of the biggest building concern in the country, says to a friend, who runs big stores in many cities:

"Prepare for a business in December bigger than you did last year."

Mr. Horowitz believes and convinces you that the time for another great business start has come.

His opinion is even more important than that of the shrewd Mr. Schwab. Mr. Schwab looks after one kind of business, Mr. Horowitz builds homes for business of a hundred kinds.

PROF. IRVING FISHER, of Yale, has a plan to help stock speculators by making brokers "share risks" and guarantee to carry stocks a certain length of time, no matter how far they drop.

Brokers will say, if they must take the risk, or a good part of it, they might as well buy the stocks themselves, and take the profits.

MR. FISHER'S suggestion will not work, although it is well meant. Another idea might work, would help business of brokers.

On the French Bourse no speculator can lose through a broker's failure. All brokers guarantee all the others. If one falls, the others make good losses of his customers.

That might be too much to ask here, with some queer ones among 1,400 brokers. But a group, fifty or a hundred, of the oldest conservative Wall Street houses, might form an association to guarantee each others' customers. Advertising that guarantee, they would probably get most of the business.

BRAZIL GUNS KILL SHIP GROUP

German Liner, Baden, Hit By Shot From Fort; Death, Injury Among Passengers

BERLIN, Oct. 25. — (AP.) — The Hamburg American steamer Baden reported to its home office today that 18 persons aboard it were killed or wounded yesterday when a shell from Fort Choapachana hit the ship as it was attempting to leave Rio de Janeiro harbor for Buenos Aires.

Most of the casualities were said to have been Spanish immigrants, bound for the Argentine.

It was stated that the Brazilian revolutionary authorities alleged they had intended the shot merely as a warning and had hit the ship accidentally. The ship carried a large number of third class passengers.

SPURNS ARMY JUNTA

PERNAMBUCO, Brazil, Oct. 25. — (AP.) — Capt. Juarez Tavora, commanding the northern revolutionary army, today notified the Federal garrison commander, at Bahia, that he himself was not yet ready to take orders from the military junta which has taken over the government at Rio De Janeiro.

He declared that when he arrived at the city of Bahia he intended to organize in the name of the people a provisional government under a responsible civilian, for, he said:

"Military men do not revolt to gain positions, and military men who adhered to the revolution at the eleventh hour are not worthy to exercise such positions."

EYES OF U. S. ON GAME HERE

Record Crowd Expected at Stadium; Notre Dame Battle Eclipses Others

By JESS CARVER.

The gods of football today will shake from their dice box fortune or misfortune, victory or defeat, for two powerful elevens as they attend the first gridiron clash of Pitt and Notre Dame since 1912. A crowd of record shattering proportions, practically certain to exceed 70,000, is to crush its way into the Pitt Stadium to watch the Irish test the teeth and claws of Pitt's unbeaten and unscored-on Panthers, and watch the Golden Cats as they strive to rip apart Knute Rockne's warriors.

From all sections of the East, with the majority swarming into town from the immediate vicinity of Pittsburgh, football's followers have descended on the city for today's classic, easily the most talked-of and most important of the nation's card for the day.

SETS RECORD HERE

The contest, a "natural" in every respect, is to set a new high mark for football attendance here.

Just as if there wasn't enough turmoil over the game itself, excitement has been fed highly inflammable fuel by a ticket scalping scandal and the appearance of a flock of bogus ducats.

The scalpers began operations early in the week, and reserved seats, priced at $3 a crack, were being offered at $25 a pair and up. General admission seats, selling regularly at $1.50, went for various sums, ranging from twice their value to $5 and even $6.

Police and Pitt authorities made every effort to remedy this condition when it suddenly was discovered that many of the tickets being peddled by the speculators were counterfeit. A thorough investigation brought to light the fact that from some source,

EXTRA POLICE ON CROWD DUTY

With clear, cool weather prevailing, the biggest crowd in Pittsburgh's football history, estimated at upwards of 70,000, was prepared to jam every available inch of the Stadium this afternoon for the long-heralded clash between the elevens of Pitt and Notre Dame.

Seating of the vast throng was complicated by the flooding of the city with counterfeit tickets. From 2,000 to 5,000 of these are believed to have been sold, with the result that trouble was considered inevitable when the holders sought to claim their places.

Four hundred extra patrolmen and 50 city and precinct detectives were detailed to handle the crowd and to be on the lookout for trouble, ticket scalpers and purveyors of spurious pasteboards.

The Better Traffic Committee, fearing an unprecedented traffic tieup in Oakland, urged use of street cars rather than automobiles, as parking space was expected to be exhausted early.

Police were stationed at downtown hotels this morning with instructions to arrest all scalpers. A number have previously been taken into custody.

2 RAIDS CLASH, 1 DEAD, 6 SHOT

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—Three holdup men and two plain clothes policemen happened to select the same time last night to raid a card game in a Madison avenue cigar store. The result was a shooting match in which a holdup man was killed and six other persons, including a policeman, were injured.

The policemen found 25 men in the room, lined them against the wall and were waiting for a patrol wagon when the holdup men entered and ordered all to put up their hands.

The policemen fired and their shots were answered by the robbers. One of the holdup men fell dead and another wounded. Patrolman Hutchinson and four of the card players were wounded.

Man Killed As Freight Piles Up

FRANKLIN, Pa., Oct. 25.—A man believed to be Andrew Fryer, of Pittsburgh, was fatally injured early today when 20 ore cars of a Pennsylvania freight train were derailed at Sarah Furnace, near East Brady. Fryer, who according to the railroad employes, was stealing a ride, died in a hospital at Kittanning.

The Buffalo flyer for Pittsburgh was rerouted by way of the New York Central to New Castle.

FAYETTE TO USE VOTE MACHINES

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Oct. 25.—Fayette County has accepted the Jamestown voting machines. Twenty-two have been delivered here and will be used in Uniontown and Connellsville.

Judge S. John Morrow late yesterday discharged a rule on the County Commissioners to show cause why an injunction should not be issued against the machines so they could not be used next month.

Attorney Anthony Cavalcante, counsel for the petitioners, alleged there were defects in the Jamestown machines and also contended that the contract was awarded even though the price was higher than that of the Poole device.

Sidi Spreckels Loses Suit Over Necklace

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 25. — (AP.)—Sidi Wirt Spreckels, once a Turkish princess, today lost another legal battle when a superior judge here levied a $64,927.50 judgment against her in favor of Tiffany's of New York and London. The judgment was for a pearl necklace purchased by her in London 10 years ago.

'Other Women' Plea Wins Divorce for Wife

Accusing her husband of being friendly with other women, Mrs. Florence G. Scott, of 2968 Belrose street, testified he proposed she become a wife in name only.

Mrs. Scott was granted a divorce yesterday from Lawry M. Scott, of 1476 Arnold avenue, Crafton Heights, by Judge Elder W. Marshall. She said they had been married 12 years and testified:

"I accused him of going out with other women, and he admitted it. He said he could not find any happiness at home and that he felt he could not get along with me. He said if I were willing to stay and keep house, he would provide for me, but he wanted his evenings out, his time free to do as he pleased. I said I was not willing to live with him under such plans."

PINCHOT RENEWS PLEDGES AT M'KEESPORT RALLIES

MANSFIELD HOST TO NOMINEE

Leslie, Kelly, Lyle Promise Support to Entire G. O. P. Ticket; Davis Absent

State Senator William D. Mansfield, Republican city chairman of McKeesport, was host last night to Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, at a banquet in the Penn McKee Hotel and a mass meeting later in the John P. Harris Theater.

Guests at both affairs included McKeesport bankers and manufacturers, judges of the courts of Allegheny County, public officials of McKeesport and the county and supporters of Pinchot in the primary.

LESLIE URGES BACKING

Art G. Leslie, whose father, State Senator M. G. Leslie, won more political campaigns than any leader in Allegheny County, according to Mansfield, said:

"Any part my father took in the politics of the city, county or state has been with the Republican party. Prohibition is not an issue in this campaign. It is a contest between the Republican and Democratic parties and I am for the entire Republican ticket from top to bottom."

Clyde Kelly, nominee to succeed himself as congressman from the Thirty-third district, declared:

"I am proud to be associated with this ticket. It is worthy of the support of every Pennsylvanian. The Republican nominee for governor, Mr. Pinchot, has been tried and tested and his former administration is open to the inspection of all.

"Pinchot is entitled to the support of every Republican in the state."

LYLE FOR TICKET

Mayor George H. Lyle, who welcomed Pinchot and the other guests, stated:

"I am going to support the straight Republican ticket from the nominee for governor down, and I am asking my friends to do the same."

Judge James B. Drew, nominee for judge of Superior Court, urged the election of Pinchot and recalled that the election in the past of a Democratic governor was followed by the election of a Democratic president of the United States.

Mansfield read a letter from E. R. Crawford, president of the McKeesport Tin Plate Company, said by Mansfield to be the largest independent tin mill in the world, in which Crawford regretted being detained in New York City. The letter read:

"I am a Republican and will support the whole ticket from top to bottom.

"I regret the opposition of some Republicans to Gifford Pinchot and sincerely believe the people of Pennsylvania will not be misled into supporting Mr. Hemphill, the Democratic candidate, who would naturally use the prestige of the great office of governor for the election of a Democratic president and Congress in 1932."

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Republican nominee for United States senator, forwarded to Mansfield a letter stating he had to stay in Washington yesterday for a meeting with President Hoover and that weather conditions prevented him from flying here for the meeting.

Pinchot repeated that his election would prevent the Philadelphia "gang" from getting control of the state; reiterated that he would abolish the coal and iron police six months after taking office, and work for legislation substituting the appointed Public Service Commission with a fair rate board to be elected by the people. He declared:

"I'm here, not alone for Pinchot but to aid in the election of 'Jim' Davis, Clyde Kelly and, of course, our old friend 'Jim' Drew—in fact all the nominees on the Republican ticket."

Pinchot recalled there is a lot of talk in the campaign about former service men and said:

"When I was governor, I appointed more disabled ex-service men to positions than any governor since the war."

LAUDS BOLTERS' MOTIVES

Concerning Democrats that have bolted their party's nominee for governor, John M. Hemphill, Pinchot said:

"When Democrats of such prominence in the state and nation as William B. Wilson, John A. McSparran, Judge Eugene Bonniwell, Vance McCormick and Bruce Sterling publicly renounce Hemphill and urge their fellow Democrats to vote for me, no one can deny that they are actuated by the highest and most serious motives.

"Each of them has fought his hardest in years past for the Democratic party. If they believed the election of Hemphill would be a real victory for the Democratic party, and for the good of the commonwealth, their thousands of followers know they would work night and day to support him."

NOTABLES ATTEND

JOB CAMPAIGN PLEDGE ASKED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—(INS.)—A campaign to have industry pledge itself that no employes will be released because of the depression until the unemployment crisis is past, is under consideration by the President's emergency committee for employment, it was learned today.

The government has virtually committed itself to release no employes in the emergency.

Industrial leaders will be expected in any event to do their part toward restoring employment to a normal basis by continuing their present working forces without regard to the effect the depression has on production. They will be expected to "carry on," and any sacrifice such a policy might cause, to consider it their contribution to the general economic welfare.

In a measure the "staggered employment" idea accomplishes in part what the committee is working on, give as many people jobs as possible, but officials recognize this entails a sacrifice by those more fortunate workers still employed.

Sort 10,000 Letters For Air Inaugural

Between 5,500 and 6,000 pieces of first-class mail were sorted at the Pittsburgh postoffice today for the first west-bound air mail plane of the new transcontinental route. East-bound mail numbered 4,000 pieces. Some of the letters had been at the postoffice for a year with instructions to hold for the inaugural service. On the face of each letter was stamped: "First Transcontinental Air Service." The mail was to be conveyed to Bettis Field by truck.

19 MORE CITY BUSINESSMEN FOR HEMPHILL

Bankers and Manufacturers Add Names to Liberal Roll; Pinchot Assailed

Nineteen more bankers and manufacturers were added to the local Business Men's Committee supporting John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal nominee for governor, according to Arthur M. Scully, county chairman of the Liberal party.

Scully declared nearly all the new members are Republicans who oppose Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for governor, on the grounds that his attacks on business are a menace to the prosperity and welfare of the state.

The new members are Charles Dreifus, W. B. Klee, John W. Alles, Alton Brown, E. E. Cole, H. V. Blaxter, G. A. Kepler, F. C. Biggert, K. C. Gardner, MacGilvray Shiras, W. B. Spellmir, J. C. Barr, G. A. Blackmore, J. F. Byers, W. L. Clause, C. A. Painter, G. G. O'Brien, Jr., C. M. Thorp and Taylor Allderdice.

HITS PINCHOT BOLE

John M. Phillips, who resigned from the State Game Commission over a controversy with Gifford Pinchot when the latter was governor, told the story in his conflict with Pinchot in a broadcast last night over KDKA. He said:

"Pinchot, while posing as our greatest living conservationist, has done more to destroy the good work done for wild life in Pennsylvania than any other individual or official in the state."

A. L. Humphrey, president of Westinghouse Airbrake Company, will speak for Hemphill in a broadcast at 10 p. m. today over KDKA.

Chairman Scully has announced the appointment of former Police Magistrate John A. Staley as manager of the Liberal party's headquarters, 512 Wood street.

BOHLEN OPENS ATTACK

Robert V. Bingay, president of the Pittsburgh Stove and Range Company and member of the Liberal party's money-raising committee has sounded a warning that the unemployment situation in the state will be intensified if Gifford Pinchot is elected governor.

Francis H. Bohlen, defeated in the primary as the anti-dry Republican candidate for United States senator, attacked the "Pinchot-Grundy" alliance in a broadcast from Scranton last night over WGBI.

T. D. CARNAHAN RITES SUNDAY

Funeral services for the late Judge Thomas D. Carnahan, who died at 11:40 a. m. yesterday, will be held at the family residence, 356 South Graham street, tomorrow at 4 p. m.

They will be conducted by the Rev. Dr. W. L. McEwan, pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church of which Judge Carnahan was a trustee. The interment, which will be private, will be made Monday morning.

Announcement of the jurist's death was made yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, before a full bench in Common Pleas Court, following which the court adjourned out of respect. The announcement was made by Harold M. Irons, chairman of the committee on biography and history of the Bar Association of Allegheny County.

8 HELD UP, 2 CUT BY THUGS

Two Armed Men in Auto Blamed for Series of Thefts; Store Looted

Two armed white men, believed to have been implicated in a number of holdups last night, were sought by police today as they rounded up suspects for questioning in connection with a dozen robberies, one in which two men's throats were slashed. They were believed to be traveling in an automobile which enabled them to strike in widely separated sections within a four-hour period in which the holdups were reported.

Shortly after midnight two men appeared at South Side Hospital with slashed throats. They gave their names as John Morgan, 25, of 728 St. Martin street, and James Carson, 29, of 321 Brownsville road, and told police they were sitting in Morgan's automobile at Colwell and Stevenson streets when two Negroes approached and demanded money. When they got out of the car, they said, the Negroes slashed them with knives and ran away.

SERIES OF HOLDUPS

Police received news of the first holdup shortly before midnight, when M. A. Baskind, of 639 Melon street, reported two armed men held him up in front of his home and robbed him of a small amount of money.

A few minutes later R. Dobkins, of 1124 North St. Clair street, was held up near his home and robbed of $17. Others reporting being held up were Louis Simon, of 5859 Nicholdson street, near his home, and robbed of $5; Allen Mern, in front of his home at 5324 Beeler street, $23; Roscoe Dixon, of 708 Copeland street, at Elmer street and Aiken avenue, $6; Thomas McCord, of Lorenz avenue, Elliott, at Fifth avenue and Washington street, $20, and James F. Sweeney, of 5411 Stanton avenue, at Baum boulevard and Euclid avenue, watch and $5.

MOTORIST ROBBED

Four men in an automobile crowded the car of J. H. Rose, of 7459 Fletcher way, to the curb on Washington boulevard, near Frankstown avenue, and robbed him of $82.

Police received a report that a brick had been thrown through the window of the clothing store of Harry Morgan, at 1021 Fifth avenue. An overcoat valued at $35 was stolen.

A burglar ransacked two Edgeworth homes and was forced to flee a third when a maid suddenly entered a room he was about to ransack last night.

MAID SCARES THUG

The thug obtained three rings, a bar pin and a wrist watch valued at several hundred dollars and $81 in cash when he ransacked the home of R. G. Jennings, in Chestnut street, while the family was away during the evening. Edgeworth police told detectives. He obtained $48 in cash when he forced an entry through a second-story window in the home of C. D. Ramsburg, in East drive, police said.

The burglar fled when confronted by a maid in the home of Alexander Robinson, in Woodland road.

Coolidge Values Sport's Training Above Scores

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Oct. 25.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Not only the interest of the students themselves but that of the general public in the college sports, of which football is easily the chief, indicates a very wholesome national development. Such sports should be kept purely amateur. That is the main attraction that they hold. Very few would care to see a contest between hired champions of different educational institutions.

Calvin Coolidge

Of course a college is primarily to educate the head, rather than the legs. But young people require a physical activity that cannot be repressed without mental injury. Dr. Edward Hitchcock was fond of telling us at Amherst that Horace Greeley said college boys were horned cattle. That is a typical newspaper attitude which reports public disorders and is silent concerning the serious work of the classroom. Yet the mental and physical sides must develop together.

The danger lies in mistaking the means for the end. Games are not merely to capture championships, but to develop minds and bodies. They should be played with every effort to win but the result may be just as good to the college students if the team loses. It is not the score but the training and playing for all you are worth that counts.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

POLICE LEAVING FORTY-THIRD STREET STATION WITH FOOD FOR THE POOR, HUNGRY — Forty-third street police as they drew rations at the station house to carry to unfortunates on their beats. They check up daily, see which families are most in need.

LIEUT. JOHN HELD PATROLMAN RAY ADAMS LIEUT. CLEMENT AUSTIN — Officers using a personal car as they made their store-to-store calls in asking merchants to donate to their unofficial good cause. They're doing it every day.

MERCHANTS AID POLICE CHARITY

Patrolmen from the Forty-third street station are walking their beats today with their uppermost thoughts on charity. The crime business out there has been very slow lately.

So they're filling the cells at the station house with food, instead of law breakers. Merchants of the district are helping them. Already 800 containers of food have been obtained.

Families of the Lawrenceville district are in need, some acutely. No one can detect poverty quicker than the patrolman. Few have bigger families than many of these blue-coated minions of the law; few know more the necessity of having so much food per month.

The idea of aiding destitute families, originating with Lieuts. Clement Austin and John Held, met with the co-operation of the storekeepers. Cases of canned goods, a shower of bags of flour, macaroni and other foodstuffs was their answer. Lieut. Austin commented:

"One cell was filled, but that's only half of what we expect. The storekeepers are pleased. We intend to show that we can help."

2 Accidents Mar World Series Rodeo

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—Two accidents occurred during last night's performance of the world series rodeo at Madison Square Garden.

Jack Wilson, of El Paso, Tex., suffered a deep gash across the stomach during the steer wrestling event and was taken to a hospital in a serious condition.

Charles Aldrich, widely known rodeo producer, is believed to have suffered a fractured leg when he was kicked by a bronco during the "bronco-busting" event.

CLUB OFFICIAL ASKS DIVORCE

Alleging desertion as the result of being locked out of their apartment by his wife, Harry Hainsworth, 33, assistant manager of the Keystone Athletic Club, has applied in Common Pleas Court for a divorce from Mrs. Ethel L. Hainsworth.

He testified they were married May 29, 1915, and that in April, 1928, when he was director of athletics at the Buffalo Athletic Club, Buffalo, N. Y., he returned home from a boxing show he had directed to find the door locked with a night latch. The next day his clothes were put out for him, he said, and his wife told him to leave.

"Baering" Down On the News With Arthur "Bugs" Baer

One year ago Wall Street forgot to hang on going around a curve.

The crash wasn't so bad. It was the bounces that hurt.

All was lost save honor. And that wasn't listed on the exchange.

One year ago we owned a yacht. But we're better off than Tommy Lipton. He's still got his.

The same broker who told us to buy on margin is now urging us to buy outright. He gets more that way.

One year ago we were trying to work with our ear at the phone, our heart in our throat and our eye on the ticker.

It proved that a sword swallower should never take snuff.

It was a beautiful financial souse. And, on sober second thought, we're still drunk.

But we're going to be prosperous again. And, gosh! how we dread it.

As the judge said, when he took the bribe, the paths of glory lead but to the gravy.

Boris Takes Queen Amid Royal Pomp at Assisi As Rain Ruins Gowns

ASSISI, Italy, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—Royal guests at the wedding of Princess Giovanna and Czar Boris III of Bulgaria were drenched by a driving rain which marred the pageantry incident to the ceremony today. The beautiful white wedding gown of the Princess got wet in the downpour, although she was protected with umbrellas.

The rain began as a drizzle just when the three royal trains, bearing the Italian king and queen, former Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria, and the groom, and their suites, pulled into the station. The drizzle increased and it was necessary for the party, proceeding up the hill along troop-lined streets to the Basilica of St. Francis, to make the trip in closed cars instead of the open tonneaus in which it had been planned to ride.

CHANGES TO HAIL

As the cars pulled up in front of the church the rain turned to a pelting torrent. Giovanna's beautiful wedding gown, although protected by a quickly offered umbrella, was considerably dampened. Others, including many royalties, unable to drive so close to the church because of the congestion of motor cars, were thoroughly drenched. Before Boris had a chance to enter the church the weather became even worse. The rain, frozen in Assisi's high altitude, changed to hail.

Had the wedding taken place on time the ceremony would have been concluded and the party at the Palace Constanzi for the wedding breakfast before the storm blew up. Its start was an hour and a half late, however, due to late arrival of the trains at Assisi station.

FORTUNE IN GOWNS

A fortune in gorgeous gowns was crumpled and ruined in the downpour. The vivid decorations which had been put up in Assisi for the occasion were wilted within a few minutes. On all sides there were exclamations of dismay and disappointment mingled with prayers to St. Francis to make the rain cease.

The marriage occurred at 11 a. m.

The marriage, which was according to Roman Catholic ritual, culminated a romance which, residents hereabouts said, had its beginning five years ago in a chance meeting of the Bulgar King and fair-haired Giovanna in a wood near San Rossore.

There were almost insurmountable religious bars to their union, but after years of negotiation the Pope by special dispensation ruled it possible if children of the marriage would be brought up in the Roman Church, and there was no succeeding orthodox marriage ceremony. Boris, by Bulgarian law, is a Greek Orthodox Catholic.

14TH CENTURY PAGEANTRY

Sixteen valets of the Assisi municipality in Fourteenth century costumes of red and blue, doublet hose, and round caps to match, met the bridal party. Eight of the valets bore lances and eight sounded a fanfare on trumpets which mingled their notes with the pealing of church bells.

At the portal Father Risso, custodian of the Basilica, with his entire chapter, met the party and offered them holy water with which to bless themselves. Then the resplendent company, containing most of the great of Italy and Bulgaria, marched up the center aisle while the vested choir of 120 voices broke into a Latin invocation, "O Lord, Make Safe Our King."

The two knelt on the faldstools before the high altar while Father Risso, clad in simple vestments befitting to matrimonial union of persons different in religions, began the marriage ceremony, with the organ rendering softly Handel's "Largo."

THEATER FOLKS WATCH FIRE

A crowd of theater patrons watched firemen battle a blaze in the elevator shaft in the John Hughes Company Building, a four-story brick building at 641 Liberty avenue, late last night. The flames which shot through the [illegible] of the shaft were quickly quenched. Deputy Chief Louis Conley believed the fire was caused by an overheated motor. He estimated the damage at $200.

Damage estimated at $1,200 resulted from a fire early today in a vacant two-story frame dwelling at 2943 Banksville avenue, owned by Mrs. James Beadling, of Castle Shannon. The house, unoccupied four months, apparently had been set afire by tramps, Battalion Chief Herman Weihrauch said.

An overheated furnace was blamed for a fire in the Beulah Baptist Church at 201 Chalfont street, last night. The flames had gained great headway when firemen arrived and extinguished them after a battle of more than two hours. The damage was estimated at $500. Sixty Negroes, attending a prayer service, fled to the street when the blaze was discovered.

PASTOR SCORES OPPONENTS OF 'BLUE LAWS'

Urges Five-Day Week Over Liberal Sunday; Denies Workingmen Want Change

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25. (AP.)—The contention that many of the persons advocating a change in the state's Sunday "blue laws" of 1794 are working for an open "commercialized Sunday" was expressed by the Rev. William B. Forney, secretary of the Philadelphia Sabbath Association, before the special committee of City Council investigating revision of the laws.

The Rev. Mr. Forney said the workingmen of Philadelphia were not back of the move for an open Sunday. Amusement interests that would take the bulk of their profits outside the city are largely supporting the proposals, he said, adding:

"We recommend favorable consideration of a five-day week. Advocates of non-productive occupations are endeavoring to increase the period of commercialized sports and amusements to seven days. No nation can long prosper industrially, morally, or spiritually that permits its period of waste to exceed that of production."

NORTH CHURCH DENIED DRYS

BOSTON, Oct. 25. — (AP.) — While a "dry" Paul Revere was spreading the doctrine of prohibition along the trail of that famous patriot an anti-dry steam calliope was tunefully pleading the cause of repeal of the prohibition law in the territory north of Boston.

David Oakes rode as Paul Revere for the Massachusetts Committee for Law Enforcement. As he set forth from the Old North Church for Lexington, however, the pastor of the ancient church, the Rev. Francis E. Webster, denied its use to the dry organization and refused to permit the tolling of the church bell.

The steam calliope and those manning it represented the Crusaders, an avowed anti-dry organization.

Margaret K. Cooney, who was wheeling the baby carriage, through her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cleavan D. Cooney, of McKees Rocks, asked $50,000 for injuries, and Mr. and Mrs. Luther E. Fluharty, of Sewickley, asked $20,000 damages for injuries to their infant daughter, Mary L. Fluharty, who was in the carriage.

Art Society Gives First Concert

Last night the Art Society held its opening concert of the season in Carnegie Music Hall when members heard Geraldine Farrar with Valentin Pavlovsky, pianist.

Dominating the audience with her art and her vivid personality, she was quite the most striking person there. With her aristocratic short, slender figure, she looked scintillating in a gold and silver and blue lame gown, fashioned with a peplum banded in fur, and a train.

Many society folks interested in music were there, among them Mrs. Arthur Polland Brill, who wore black taffeta and tulle and a wrap of black velvet and gold.

Mrs. Edward King Thompson, in gold lace, and Barbara Ewing in black lace, I saw in the foyer during intermission.

Early arrivals included Mrs. Mortimer Miller, wearing eggshell satin crepe and a gold cloth wrap, furred in fitch. Her son, Torrence Miller, was chatting with friends during the intermission.

Mrs. Harold J. Dorrance wore a black crepe gown and a black velvet wrap, and Miss Alice Grey chose a black ensemble. An attentive listener was Mrs. Francis de Lacey Hyde, who was in black velvet, embroidered in steel beads. Miss Dorothy Slack wore an informal gown of hunters' green crepe.

Patronsat Concert

Petite Frances Kier, a debutante of the season, chose a charming gown of orchid moire, fashioned with cowl drapery in the back. She was with her father, Frank J. Kier.

Another concert goer was Mrs. George Pomeroy Bassett, looking dignified in a severely simple gown of black velvet and a wrap of velvet and ermine.

Ann Watt, wearing black velvet and a pistachio green velvet wrap, arrived with her fiance, William H. Robinson, Jr. Mrs. Edwin Ruud was there with her protege, Betty Burke, who has just returned from two years' voice study with Melanie Kurt in Berlin.

Others I noticed were Mrs. John Freeman and her mother, Mme. Kate Lippa; Mrs. Ruth Seaman, wearing a white ermine wrap, Mrs. Will A. Rhodes and her daughter Sarah; Mrs. J. Vick O'Brien, wearing yellow chiffon and a bronze velvet wrap; Mrs. William L. Monroe, Mrs. H. C. Kreusler, Miss Emilie McCreery, Mrs. Lawrence Tucker, Mrs. Edwin Ruffin, Mrs. D. A. Pitcairn and Peggy Nelson, daughter of the John E. Nelsons.

Now that the whirl of the debutante season is just a little over a week off, news of additional entertainments for the buds is being heard.

Sets Debut for Nov. 14

I've just learned of the debut date of one of the girls about to embark on her first season in the social world. Eugenia Nash, daughter of the Thomas Nashes, of Bellefonte street.

Eugenia will be presented at the Norfolk cotillion, Norfolk, Va., on November 14. And she'll attend all the many traditional southern events of cotillion week.

On November 5, Mrs. Nash and Eugenia will leave for Norfolk and will be the guests of relatives, the Leigh Powells, of Norfolk. Later in the season Eugenia will be presented in Pittsburgh.

The opening reception of the Art Society brought a brilliant audience to Carnegie Hall last night to hear the perpetually charming Geraldine Farrar in song recital.

There was once a noble school of singing. Those singers who enlisted were marked for their intelligence, their diligence, their sincerity. They all learned to sing, so that if age or normal wear and tear did affect the voice, they still possessed that science of vocal production that could overcome these defects. They learned all music of all epochs and nations. They were fired with a love for their art which is only comparable to the idealism of Cellini when he sacrificed other masterpieces to the melting pot that he might cast his Perseus. Of that race of singers is Geraldine Farrar.

In this day, her voice, which is finer than when last heard here, passes notice in the brilliance of her interpretations, and yet one is frequently brought to notice an exceptionally turned phrase or inflated word. Her very attitude during the prelude of her song and her eloquent gestures leave no doubt of her intentions. Each song becomes autobiographical.

After the shockingly trite programs of last winter, Farrar's offering of such excellent music gives us renewed hope. Her songs were all by old favorite composers, and yet, it is safe say that but two or three of those songs were known to the audience. For differentiation in style there were formal Mozart and delicately humorous Schumann; a reverent Schubert preluded the impassioned Wolf and Strauss; then old French played against newer pastorales.

Valentin Pavlovsky played accompaniments with extreme restraint, and was careful to reveal little of his pianistic talent until he played solo. He is a far more brilliant player than usually entertains us while the singer is resting, and though he occasionally sacrifices music for speed, both Bach and Rachmaninoff found in him a good disciple.

There were many encores, Franz's "Marie," Brahms' "Vergebliches Staendchen," Massenet's "L'Eventail," Gretchaninoff's "Snowdrop," also an Etude of Mendelssohn and a Mazurka of Chopin. Since the Art Society's policy is "exceptional music," let us have more of Geraldine Farrar.

RIGID PASTORAL CODE OUTLINED

OMAHA, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—The president's council of the Seventh Day Adventist Church created a committee of seven to draw up a more rigid code governing the conduct of its ministers.

The committee was instructed to frame a new code to be presented for official action at the opening of the sect's international fall conference here next week.

Among the influences responsible for the break down of respect for the ministry the council said were a tendency to use "joke books" in the pulpit in place of the Bible, shallow and superficial preaching, efforts to imitate popular preachers, and story-telling in place of preaching from the Gospel.

Church leaders said the denomination wanted no minister who doubted any part of the Bible was divinely inspired. The conference was preliminary to the consideration of a plan for ministerial internships, under which theological graduates would be sent to local conferences for a year of post-graduate work.

Chanler Funeral Services Monday

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(INS.)—Funeral services for Robert Winthrop Chanler, noted artist, will be held here Monday. Burial will be private.

MORROW URGES BUYING DRIVE

NEWTON, N. J., Oct. 25.—(AP.)—Dwight W. Morrow, Republican candidate for the United States Senate, indorsed the "buy now" drive in a speech here last night. He said:

"Too many men and women have put off buying because they lost money last fall. Too many people are groaning over market losses that are non-existent. This propaganda of hoarding money must cease. People must get into close contact with business and start the ball rolling.

"Depression has taken its course, but it is now near the end. We have had good times and we shall still have them and under present conditions we shall soon have them. Our people have plenty of money in the bank, but they have lost confidence and will not invest it.

"In the olden times people had hardships and sacrifices. Their travail taught them how to overcome those hardships. That's just what we have to do today."

Federation Plans Home In Capital

One of the most frequently mentioned subjects among the women attending the district club institute of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women yesterday was the establishment of headquarters by the Federation in the Penn-Harris Hotel, Harrisburg. This is a milestone in Federation history, for in its 35 years existence it has never had a home of its own. Headquarters will be opened November 1 and will be presided over by Mrs. Margaret Becker Kulp, of Harrisburg, as executive secretary. A committee of three, Mrs. S. Blair Luckie, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Walter Miller, of Lancaster, and Mrs. Isaac Hiester, of Reading, will act as trustees.

Nine of the 14 counties in the district were represented at yesterday's gathering of 160 women who came from 45 different clubs. Mrs. J. Andrew Gettig, district club institute chairman, presided and gave an outline of club institute work and then introduced various members who led the open forums on club management, state and county federation, legislation, citizenship, libraries, motion pictures, publicity, loan scholarships, the home and education, all of which are features of State Federation work.

The Federation's plan for its part in the General Federation's endowment fund was explained. Under the plan as presented by Mrs. Ambrose Nevin Diehl at the recent convention, each club woman in the state is asked to contribute $1.25, which is her final and only gift, and entirely distinct from her per capita dues, which are paid through her club.

Explain Fund Plan

Mrs. Stephen Byers, in speaking on motion pictures, taxed the women with being lax in their cooperation with motion picture firms. Mrs. Byers praised the motion picture managers in Washington, Pa., saying they had cooperated in furnishing educational films and in reducing prices.

Mrs. J. G. Chalfant told of the work on behalf of the county library which the club women of Tioga County have sponsored and which is to be voted upon at the county election. Mrs. D. Edwin Miller made an eloquent plea for further junior-senior scholarships and said these might be financed through life insurance. Mrs. John M. Phillips talked of the goals of the home department of which she is chairman and announced that the Rev. Dr. Hugh Thomson Kerr will speak over the radio on American home Sunday, November 23, on "Religion and the Home." Music was by Ruth McMullin Forsythe, contralto, with Mrs. W. J. Osborne accompanying.

Just before adjournment several of the women gave their outstanding impressions of the Scranton convention.

Members of the Pittsburgh Colony of New England Women will hear Mrs. George Pearson tell of her trip through Spain at the November 10 meeting, for which Mrs. Edward R. Buchanan will be hostess. The December meeting is to be known as "invitation day," and will be held in the Edgewood Club. Councilman Robert Garland will speak on "The Scotch-Irish in Western Pennsylvania." A symposium on famous New England women will be given at the January session, a talk by Margaret Constance Scott will feature the February gathering and in March an all-day sewing for charity will be held. Two plays directed by Miss Vanda E. Kerst will be given for the April program, and the annual meeting in May will close the year.

FILM REVIEWS ALONG WITH HOLLYWOOD AND NEW YORK CHAT

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Nick Modrak, the traffic cop who waves the autos by at Bigelow boulevard and Tyrone street, lodges a complaint against the Austin babies. He says they're making him humpbacked.

During the 20 hours Lindy was in town he was virtually a prisoner in his suite in the William Penn.

He had dinner in his rooms Thursday and breakfast Friday in the same place. Once the papers announced that he was stopping at the hotel the telephone calls poured in for him, but the hotel's operators had been instructed to shake all calls except those of a choice few.

Al Gough, the only Pittsburgh reporter who flew from New York to Pittsburgh with the Colonel, described him thus:

"He's an aichuva good fellow."

Gough and Lindy had a pleasant conversation for an hour or more on the ride over, the talk ranging from Lindy's levity to the exaggerated dangers of flying over the Alleghenies.

Lindy didn't specify that anything he had said was not for publication but Gough, when he came to write his story, decided to take advantage of the Colonel's conversation and quoted him in good taste.

The plane was already in the air before Gough met Lindbergh. Lindy saw him sitting in a rear seat of the ship, walked back to him and said, "You're from Pittsburgh, aren't you? I'd like to meet you."

No one earned more satisfaction over Lindy's visit than Chauncey White, of the William Penn.

"Lindy takes other people up," brags White, who is an elevator operator, "but I took him up."

Charlie Earley, who calls himself a demon reporter, tells of some of the names he's interviewed:

Admiral Byrd—A perfect gentleman, suave and urbane.

Calvin Coolidge—Very much silent.

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge—His direct antithesis, likeable.

Paul Jaworski—Plenty hard-boiled.

Father Duffy—Paternal, advising.

President Hoover — Talked about fishing.

Senator Jim Reed—Outspoken to the extent of being noisy.

De Wolf Hopper—Wanted to recite "Casey at the Bat—" and succeeded.

Ted Lewis — Affable and slightly shy.

Jud Greer (the demon deer hunter)—A capricious clown.

Prince William of Sweden —Shy.

On that date she and I were out at what is now Kennywood Park waiting for the roller coaster to be built and no sooner did I turn my back than she was gone. A fellow told me last week that Ida (her name was Ida) was running a Tom Thumb golf course in Terre Haute, but I wrote to the chief of police there and he said there were no girls by the name of Ida in Terre Haute. If you can raise a little dough let me know and we'll run out there and open up a course. By the way, wasn't it Bernard Shaw who first coined that immortal phrase, 'Please pass the butter?

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal Oct.25.

Every paper every morning tells of a big gathering and prominent men who have spoken on "better times." If chamber of commerce give some worker a job instead of some speaker a dinner there would be no unemployment. There has been more "optimism" talked and less practiced than at any time during our history. Every millionaire has offered a speech instead of keeping still and offering a job. Our optimism is all at a banquet table, where everybody has more than they can eat.

Old Farce May Be Revived As Talk Film for Buster Keaton

By HARRISON CARROLL.

(Copyright 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 25.

Various Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer officials have been showing an interest in a local revival of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath." It develops that the studio is negotiating for the talkie rights to this merry farce.

Back in 1921, the old Metro Company produced "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," with Eugene Pallette and Ruth Stonehouse in leading roles. Silent rights automatically went to M. G. M. upon the merger of the two companies.

Buster Keaton

Though the studio is noncommittal, the farce is, in all likelihood, intended for Buster Keaton. The comedian and his staff of gag-men have attended performances at the El Capitan theater in Hollywood.

Charlotte Greenwood, who is very popular hereabouts, stars in the current revival. Her husband is head of the music department at M. G. M., but to date no mention is made of her for the talkie.

A TOUGH CASE

You wonder why directors raise their voices?

An actor in "Stampede" had a line of dialogue: "I haven't seen McMasters all day."

A well-known stage player was supposed to reply: "I haven't either."

But training prevailed. It came out "eye-ther."

Director Howard Sloman pointed out that this was Texas in the good old days.

Once more, the first actor said: "I haven't seen McMasters all day."

The stage player came back quickly: "Ney-ther have I."

I NOTE THAT Joseph De Grasse, who used to be well known in the silents now resides at Sonora, Cal., where he has taken up painting in oils . . . Cedric Gibbons has had to reconstruct his Santa Monica home, which orginally was planned as a bachelor establishment . . . Ruby Keeler (Mrs. Al Jolson) will be back in Hollywood in a few weeks . . . Gilmore Millen, author of "Sweet Man," is writing an original story at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer . . . Ann Harding and Harry Bannister have the highest swimming pool in the film colony. They live on a hill-top and overlook the San Fernando Valley and Los Angeles . . . Harold Lloyd has a spectacular artificial waterfall on his Beverly Hills estate.

MATRIMONIAL WOES ON ENRIGHT SCREEN

By BARBARA I. WILBERT.

"For the Love o' Lil" at the Enright, features Sandy and Lil of Liberty Magazine fame, played by Elliot Nugent and Sally Starr, respectively. It is a typical picture of modern family life in which the husband's or—better still, the wife's friend is the leading man. Yes, he is until Sandy makes some "contacts" and then things begin to look differently. If ever there was an example of why young married couples should run their own affairs, this is it. The work of Jack Mulhall seems to carry the play along. The picture is amusing throughout.

On the stage, Dick Powell presents "Hickville Corners," which has a surprise beginning and after that is just one surprise after another. We hear Bobby Folsom sing her dramatic numbers, in fact, we feel we can't hear enough of them. Another song presentation leads into a clever brother dancing act, a show in itself—or—Frank Radcliffe & Co., then the "Rube" band and the milkmaids. Johnny Mitchell has Milton Slosser's former place at the organ.

AMOS AND ANDY MAKE LOCAL FILM DEBUT IN THE WARNER

By MILDRED FILLMORE.

Amos 'n' Andy, the toothpaste radio comics, are making their local screen debut in the Warner. Their picture is titled "Check and Double Check." Measured by motion picture standards the film is far from a "knockout." But it has a lot of laughs. It should go over big with Amos 'n' Andy fans.

The voices of the stars sound the same on the screen as they do on the radio. And the dialogue they speak is pretty familiar. All the manufactured words and trick mannerisms of speech are there.

Ruby Taylor and Madame Queen are among the missing, although there is lots of talk of them in the taxicab office. The Kingfish is present, however, in the person of Russell Powell.

The picture story isn't so much. It brings in the deserted house angle and the stormy night. Amos 'n' Andy register the scared-to-death manner and falter through the old place in search of a secret paper having something to do with the Mystic Knights of the Sea. They find this paper and also come across an old deed that makes everything come out right for a romantic hero and heroine, portrayed by Sue Carrol and Charles Morton.

Highlights of the comedy episodes depict a lodge meeting, Amos 'n' Andy putting a tire on their taxicab and a wild ride through New York streets with Brother Amos at the wheel.

BILLY THE KID RIDES ENLARGED SCREEN IN ALDINE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Billy the Kid" is the new film in the Aldine. It is, in reality, an enlarged shooting gallery. It is one of those new Realife productions that is played on a screen almost the size of the stage and the boys are bombarding each other with lead most of the time.

This Billy must have been some lad! Anyway, in the film he must kill a dozen persons. Maybe more, but we got tired counting. And as everyone, in addition to Billy, shoots at some one else, you can imagine the slaughter.

HE'S READ THE ADS!

But it all makes for rip-roaring action. And there is some humor—even some that wasn't meant to be. Take the burning building scene. Billy is trapped within. But nonchalantly he lights a cigaret from a burning rafter that falls at his feet.

Incidentally, the movie dr gs in a modern version of Gunga Din. A fellow runs a gauntlet of bullets in an effort to get water for his ambushed pals. He gets back with the water, all right, but the bullets get him. And his dying speech is: "I'm a whisky drinker. I am, to think I'd die going after a drink of water." But such is the irony of fate and the movies.

HAPPY FADEOUT

John Mack Brown portrays Billy the Kid. We don't know what Billy himself would think about Mr. Brown, but we think he isn't such a success in this part.

Wallace Beery does a neat part as the sheriff. It is he who champions the happy ending by allowing Billy to ride across the border.

The picture has a rather weak romantic angle with Kay Johnson trying to do the best she can with her heroine.

Dedication Nov. 15 At Slippery Rock

A number of Pittsburgh educators will attend the dedication of the new $170,000 training school at Slippery Rock State Teachers College, November 15.

Dr. James N. Rule, deputy state superintendent of public instruction, is to deliver the dedicatory address. The keys to the building will be turned over to George Gaibreath, president of the board of trustees, by George T. Titzel, district engineer of the state department of property and supplies.

Movie in German In Moose Temple

The German talkies have come to town for three days, and "Dich Hab Ich Geliebt" will be presented in the Moose Temple today, Monday and Tuesday. Mady Christians is the blonde heroine and Walter Jankuhn the manly tenor of this first importation from a Berlin studio.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

Illusion.

Yes, snow is more than simply white to you,
(For you are of the few, and you are wise);
Strange, spectral fires bewitch it in your eyes,
And color it with opalescent hue.
The night, more than a black abysmal way,
Paved with the glow of phosphorescent moon:
An avenue that leads into high-noon,
Where flames the august ultimate of day.
You see beyond, you see beneath, above:
There are no walls nor barriers for you;
You have the faculty of seeing through
The very sacred, secret veil of love.

L'Envoi

Then when one day you failed to rouge your pan,
I dropped this sonnet in a rubbish can.

—H. P. Stoddard.

Merciless Truth

A group of stay-up-lates, including Joe Moore, the ice skating genius, were discussing a chum who was taking his Broadway seriously. The chum certainly looked it, too, appearing on the verge of a collapse.

"Did you ever take any exercises?" Moore asked the weary one.

"Haven't any time for exercise," said the limp lad who was trying to hog all the money on Broadway.

"Well," counseled Moore, "you'd better watch your health, old boy. The exercise you get going to the bank once a week isn't enough!"

In Fewer Words

"Once you reach the top," pepigrams Bugs Baer, "there are no local stops."

From Hollywood

Bert Kalmar brings it back from the Gold Coast as a bit of eavesdropped chatter:

"How long were you married to him?"

"I don't know—I forgot to look at my watch."

Oh, Mr. Ripley!

One office in the Broadway sector features a little sentiment, honest! It is a card under the glass top of her dask and it reads:

"To lose a friend—is to die a little."

To keep from falling asleep at the Rosenbloom-Bain bout at the Garden the other eve'g, we borrowed a lad's program and consumed the contents. Most engaging was discovering that the Madison Square Garden historian, or editor of that program, had disagreed with the various sports writers on the local rags. The sportsmen, you know, pointed out that in his 169 starts Kid Chocolate had been dropped for the first time by Kid Berg.

The Garden program asserts that on February 17, 1930, in Fall River, the Keed lost in eight rounds to one Frankie Hennessey. This probably is inaccurate, considering that the same program, which lists McLarnin's outstanding bouts, ignores McLarnin's debut in New York when, with practically the first punch, he flattened the pride of the town, Sid Terris.

Revised

Ide Gruber toys with it in this manner:

"Those moderns who marry in haste—re-pet at leisure."

By Way of Report

Pre-war Overholt rye whisky is now up to $175 per case and it is worth it. Napoleon Brandy, but good Napoleon Brandy, is peddling for the same price, and it might interest you to know that physicians are permitted 100 likker prescriptions every three months. Most of the doctors in town, however, sell the entire lot to their favorite bootlegger for $2.50 each—the legger takes the prescription to a druggist and gets Government controlled hooch. Par'm me while I pause to howl.

Also police records will prove that Greater New York now has 50,348 speakeasies. The average speakeasy staff is five—so if they were all closed by law—250,000 more people would help congest the unemployment traffic.

Add Sweet Revenges

To hear the illiterati tell it, a magazine is plotting to publish a full page of Dorothy Parker's pungent pepigrams, her pert patter and her powerful pot-shots. Miss Parker, it appears, will be toasted by the magazine as the world's champion flip cracker, and if this is true, Miss Parker very likely will enjoy a good laugh, herself.

For the mag 10 years ago fired her. She was its dramatic editor, and she was dismissed because of a wisecracking blackball penned about Billie Burke.

Add Similes

Joe Cawthorn's: Spiteful as the behavior of a golf ball. Vincent Martell's: As conspicuous as a run in a girl's stocking.

TWO MOVIES TODAY; NEW STAGE BILLS

Maurice Chevalier in "Playboy of Paris," opened in the Sheridan Friday and will open in the Fulton, Sixth street, today. Frances Dee, O. P. Heggie, Stuart Erwin and Eugene Pallette are in the cast. The review of this film will appear Monday.

"Swing High," a film story of the circus, with a cast headed by Helen Twelvetrees and Nick Stuart, comes to the Harris screen today.

"The Well of Romance," a new comic operetta, with libretto by Preston Sturges, and music by H. Maurice Jacquet, will have its world premiere in the Nixon Monday. Norma Terris and Howard Marsh have the leading roles. After one week at the Nixon the piece goes direct to New York City.

Katherine Cornell, coming to the Shubert Alvin next week in "Dishonored Lady," is bring the original New York cast and production. Matinees are to be given Wednesday and Saturday.

"That Ferguson Family" announced by the George Sharp Players for next week, is a comedy drama by Howard Chenery who hails from Kalamazoo, Mich. His play projects the trials and the joys of a typical family of modest means.

The Golden Rod Showboat will begin its fifteenth and last week at Montrose-on-the-Allegheny Monday night with the presentation of the old melodrama, "St. Elmo." There is heat on the boat Capt. Menke announces.

GEN. IRONFACE HUSTON PLAYS SEE-SAW IN 'VIRTUOUS SIN'

By GEORGE SEIBEL

At last we know why Russia lost the war. While General Walter Huston, known as Old Iron-Face, was out walking with lovely Kay Francis in the moonlight, Hindenburg smashed the Russian front. It all came out in "The Virtuous Sin," the new screen romance at the Penn Theater.

George Seibel trying to save her husband, condemned to die by the military machine.

This iron-faced general even plays see-saw with the frisky Kay, who is only her husband, condemned to die by the military machine. Just why he must die is not very clear—the worst thing he has done is look through a microscope and read a book in the dugout. But die he must, although he is Kenneth McKenna, a very handsome fellow.

BUT SHE SAVES HIM

The good old plot that has been used from Shakespeare to d'Annunzio, in "La Tosca" and "The Road to Rome," does duty once again—and she saves him. Behind General Huston's iron face, Walter is merely human.

But Kay Francis has to perform a lot of thrilling deeds to prove this. She has to kiss a sentry, she has to become a cabaret entertainer, she has to make love to half the Russian army, and she has to go out in the moonlit woods to play seesaw with General Huston. That was when Hindenburg broke through.

Every now and then they tell each other that it's "absolutely childish" or "utterly absurd," but it's thrilling just the same. That's what screen romances ought to be, n'est-ce-pas?

SOME CLEVER DOGS

In the stage show a very high degree of intelligence was displayed by the five or six dogs of "Max and His Gang." Their backward somersaults and other feats were most clever.

Then there were Gold and Ray, dancers with real zip and zest. And Lafayette with his partner in an Apache dance particularly ferocious. Not to speak of a contortionist whose spine is on a pivot. As for Ted Claire, master of ceremonies, Wild Oscar broadcasting and David Pesetzki playing real music—they were all there and all good as usual.

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers, and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: "In Chicago, 300 young couples think $40 is enough to start housekeeping on. Does this seem a likely sum to you?"

Mr. Schmidt

JACK SCHMIDT, North Side. Yes, it seems to me that with prices as they are, a young couple could get along very comfortably on $40 a week. The trouble with so many young couples is that they want to start out on too high a scale.

Mr. Nome

CHARLES NOME, North Side. Yes, I should think that a young couple could live and get along all right on $40 a week. Many of the best regulated families that I know, I have no doubt, were started on less.

Miss Beckert

MISS MARIAN BECKERT, Carrick. I think it could be done on $40 a week, but I also think that in a very short time they will find out that they will not be able to have those little things that mean so much for marital happiness.

GEORGE H. NEWMAN, North Side, Clerk. They must think they can live on love. I do not think that would be enough for two people to live on and still get some enjoyment out of life.

Mr. Newman

MISS VERA PEPLINSKI, Homewood Clerk. These young couple are very wise. It seems to me that too many young people put off their marriages too long, because they do not think they can live on such a salary.

Miss Peplinski

MISS ELLEN JOHNSON, Carrick, Operator. Yes, I believe that they could and should start out on about $40 a week. They should start small and grow as they progress. Lots of homes have been started on less.

Miss Johnson

TALKIEGRAMS PROVE BIG HIT

Pittsburgh has gone "Talkiegram"—good and plenty. The popularity of the new and fascinating game started by the Sun-Telegraph is spreading like a grass fire fanned by a stormy breeze. In hundreds of homes "Talkiegrams" have become the favorite evening pastime. Not only for the children but "Ma" and "Pa" are playing it with equal enthusiasm. The game was originated by the Sun-Telegraph, and many newspapers outside of Pittsburgh have already asked for permission to use it for their readers.

"Talkiegrams" have banished bridge and other indoor games for the time being, and their popularity is destined for a long reign.

There's a thrill in Sun-Telegraph "Talkiegrams"—a corking big thrill when you write one that you think will win a prize, and then there's the thrill of winning your share of the $25 or two of the 100 theater tickets that the Sun-Telegraph is giving away every day for the best "Talkiegrams" submitted by readers of this newspaper.

One of the attractive features about the new game is that you can play it every day—you can write as many "Talkiegrams" as you wish. Every one in the family can write them. It is easy and lots of fun. Try it tonight.

Prize winners will be announced every day beginning next Monday when the lucky "Talkiegram" fans will be told how they came out on No. 1, printed last Monday. Here's a fine chance to get cash or tickets for the best motion picture theaters in Pittsburgh. Let's go!

HEMPHILL HITS AT MRS. PINCHOT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25. —(AP.)—John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal candidate for governor, speaking at a rally at the Liberal party headquarters, said he was the victim of a whispering campaign. He asserted:

"In my absence an unusually vicious whispering campaign has been carried on against me. It seems to be the action of Mrs. Pinchot, whose husband has put her to work spreading the news about the state that Hemphill has driven a successful patronage bargain—promising 60 per cent of his patronage to the politicians.

"Under and by what authority she makes this statement I haven't the faintest idea, unless it is based upon their own family experiences. I have made no deal with anybody on the subject of patronage or anything else."

BUSINESSMEN HEAR ROCKNE

Knute Rockne, head coach of Notre Dame University, declared football is an experimental laboratory, where youth experiments with itself in reliance, courage and self-control. He addressed Pittsburgh businessmen and educators in the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

Coach Rockne expressed his belief that football was a great character builder for youth. Thomas A. Dunn, first vice president of the Chamber of Commerce, presided. John B. "Jock" Sutherland, University of Pittsburgh coach, introduced the Notre Dame mentor.

Bonfire-Carbide Blast Hurts Boy

John Tollan, 15, of 76 Briggs street, Overbrook, is in South Side Hospital with serious burns of the neck, face and hands, suffered, police reported, when a can of cabride exploded in a bonfire built by Tollan and other boys yesterday. The others escaped.

Real Estate

The C. L. Saxton Company has sold for Josephine A. Demor to C. C. Mackey an apartment building, containing three apartments of four rooms and bath each, on a lot 40x100 feet located at 3171 Brighton road. The property rents for $1,000 a year. Eight thousand five hundred dollars was named as the amount paid for the apartment and lot. The C. L. Saxton Company has been appointed renting agent.

W. B. Dawson and Company has sold for Mrs. Emma F. Johnston, of Bellevue, to Miss Beryl McWilliams, of South Hills, a lot fronting 55 feet on Jefferson street and running back 140 feet. The purchaser will erect a home on the property. The price paid for the lot was $1,500, according to the W. B. Dawson and Company.

The home of P. H. W. Smith, consisting of 12 rooms and four baths located in Grove street, Sewickley, has been sold for him to William Metcalf, Jr., by the Porter and MacDowell Company. The property contains an acre of ground with colonial type house. Mr. Metcalf expects to occupy the house November 1.

Gorio Harbors Annie at His Country Home

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Following the killing of "The Edgewater Kid," a member of Goldie Gorio's North Side gang, Kinky King, leader of the rival West Side gang, is murdered. Evidence points to Goldie, but crooked politics prevent his arrest. To satisfy the public, Polack Annie, the Kid's woman, and formerly Kinky's, is arrested. When the police chief refuses to release Annie, Goldie creates havoc by destroying public property. Later, he raids the jail and kidnaps Annie. The police give chase. As they close in, Goldie throws a twenty-dollar gold-piece at the chief, striking him in the eye, and escapes. The chief plans to deal with the gangsters in the only manner they understand. He makes a proposition to Joe Gleason, heir to Kinky's crown, whereby Gleason is to wipe out Goldie's gang, the rival territory to be his reward.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XV.

Polack Annie awoke at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of the day she had been snatched from the detention cell at police headquarters—awoke in a gilded cage. She slowly opened her eyes, conscious for a moment that she was in strange surroundings, and she stared upward. She seemed to be in a little tent, the top of which was draped in aureated silk that ran in regular pleats from a large, round button, after the manner of ceilings in night clubs.

Hardly turning her head she looked through a pair of draped curtains on her right and the sunlight illuminated a large room the like of which Polack Annie had never before seen. Her mind began to clear now and tumbled back over the events of the early day—her rescue, the wild ride, the night club vododeo, from the sedan radio and then—oblivion. She had passed out in the car, softly weeping as she thought of the Kid. No vivid memory of how she had come here, or how or when she had gotten to bed.

She was wide awake now. She threw back the covers and sat over the edge, rubbing her eyes, swollen from the first good sleep in days.

She threw back her head, yawned audibly, and stretched her willowy arms. The vitality of her youthful body surged back to her. She stood up, and then for the first time noticed that she was clad in purple pajamas—trimmed with gold!

"Gawd!" she exclaimed.

Admires Beautiful Things In the Room

The U-shaped bed on which she had slept and which was canopied in silk, stood on a dais. She stepped down and walked to the window. Outside she saw a spacious lawn. The trees had been nipped by the first frost of autumn and the leaves were tinted like a thousand little palettes. The window was half open and a refreshing breeze stole into the room. Annie inhaled deeply.

She began a tour of inspection of the room. In soft, golden tones was depicted on the ceiling the legend of Jason on his quest of the Golden Fleece. To Annie it was merely a pretty picture.

Her bare feet sank deep into the soft Chinese carpet. The chairs were fragile and gilded. A vase sat in the middle of a gilt spider-legged table. In it were fresh yellow roses. Annie gathered them into her arms and inhaled their fragrance.

As she was moving about the room, admiring this bit of bric-a-brac and that picture, the door opened softly and a yellow-skinned maid, a small white apron over her dress stood smiling in the doorway. Across her arm were two large Turkish towels and in her hands she held several bottles and a huge sponge.

"Is Madam ready for her bath?" politely asked the maid.

Polack Annie for a moment could not speak. Then she said: "I'm hungrier'n hell."

Breakfast
Maid Orders Morning Meal for Her

"Madam will feel better after she has had her bath," spoke the inscrutable maid, advancing. "But what would you like for breakfast?"

"Orange juice, buckwheat cakes, ham and eggs, toast and coffee," unhesitatingly answered Annie.

The phlegmatic servant bowed and walked to a little doll, which was standing on a small table. She lifted it up and disclosed a gold-plated telephone.

"Send Madam orange juice, buckwheat cakes, ham and eggs, toast and coffee," she ordered. Then she turned and walked to a door which she opened at the turn of a golden knob. She went in and Annie heard the water running in the tub. The maid appeared at the door and motioned to her.

Annie hesitated on the threshold and peered inside. It was the largest bathroom she had ever seen. It was half as big as the bedroom. The floors and walls were tessellated in small yellow and black cubes. The tub was sunken—on the level with the floor. It was already half filled and the water looked bluish and inviting. At one end was a dressing table and arrayed on it were innumerable articles of the toilet—all in solid gold—like the plumbing.

Annie entered gingerly. She waited for the maid to leave, and when she saw that the servant had no intention of doing so she boldly jerked off her pajamas and stepped into the tepid water. The maid knelt beside the tub and began to lather her back. But Annie took the sponge and soap from her. She floundered in the large bathtub and for a moment the joy of living pulsed through her slender, lithe body.

Annie Goes With Guide Through Woods

A cold shower and then the maid dried her, even to her small, pink toes. She found a complete outfit—tweed suit, stockings, small walking shoes—all laid out for her. Her breakfast had been brought in on a castered table and her chair was invitingly half turned.

When she had eaten, the maid announced:

"Mr. Gorio left word that if you wished to take a walk he would have an escort for you."

Polack Annie looked out the window and then nodded assent.

Downstairs a tall, not unhandsome fellow was waiting. He had two large, tawny-haired police dogs on a leash. Annie nodded to him and started out over the lawn.

"There's a path over there leading through the woods," said her guide, who followed behind her.

She took the little tanbark path which led directly into the forest. The trail was labyrinthian. She was now lost in a wilderness of great trees, and then she came upon a small lake, in the center of which was a miniature lighthouse. She walked on and on and she thought the loveliness would never end, when suddenly a sharp turn brought her in view of the squat, stone mansion which seemed to be built directly into the hill in back of it and formed a part of it.

When she walked through the front door the maid was there to meet her.

"Mr. Gorio said he would meet you in the living room when you returned," she announced. She led the girl to where there were large comfortable chairs of golden oak, upholstered in leather. Predominating one side of the room was a huge fireplace, with massive andirons, upon which lay several unlighted logs. Big French windows opened out on the slope of the front lawn.

For the Kid
Says Gangster Was Like A Son to Him

Annie sank into one of the chairs and sighed. She was pleasantly tired.

"Well, Babes, do you feel better?"

It was Goldie who had come in behind her. He took a chair near her and lit a cigaret. Annie smiled at him.

"You can stay here, Babes, until everything's ironed out. You can have anything you want. Just ask for it."

"You got a great layout here, Goldie," she sighed. "I never knew such things could be—outside o' books!"

Then she looked at him a bit quizzically.

"But—but why, Goldie, do you do all this for me—take all these chances?" she asked.

"Babes," and Goldie leaned forward and looked at her through half-closed eyes, eyes in which she could not read the intense passion dampered in their depths, "the Edgewater Kid was like a son to me. I blew up a whole town for him. You are his girl. I feel the same towards you."

He arose and patted her cheek and she heard the door close behind her. Annie dug into her pocket for her handkerchief.

"He loved the Kid, too—God be good to him," she sobbed.

KEHOE FAVORS PINCHOT

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 25. —(AP.)—The Pinchot-for-governor headquarters here has given out a statement quoting John C. Kehoe, "for more than 20 years the Democratic leader of Pittston, Luzerne County," as favoring Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for governor.

Kehoe said he challenged Hemphill's sincerity "both as a Democrat and as a wet."

Kehoe said he and his family are risking something like a million dollars in supporting Pinchot's candidacy. He said he personally holds about 18,000 shares of public utility stocks and the holdings of his family bring the total to about 25,000. He asked:

"Would I give my support to Gifford Pinchot if I thought for one minute that he was even a slight danger to any honest business?"

LEWIS DENIES DEAL FOR JOB

HARRISBURG, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—Published reports that his support of Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for governor, was predicated on the promise of being appointed to the governor's cabinet as secretary of revenue in the event of Pinchot's election were denied here to day by Samuel S. Lewis, former state treasurer.

Lewis, now serving as a special deputy auditor general, is Republican of York County and as such has been active in Pinchot's behalf since before the primary. Lewis withdrew as a candidate for Republican gubernatorial nomination prior to the primary.

FRANCHISE WON BY ENGELSBERG

Joseph Engelsberg, recognized by Mayor Charles H. Kline as chairman of the Third Ward, was enrolled as a voter by the Registration Commission after a 15-minute hearing yesterday.

Engelsberg failed to register in his election district September 4 and 16 and October 4, days set by law for registration, and would not have been permitted to vote at the election November 4 without the Registration Commission's dispensation.

Bennie Neaman, of 1541 Center avenue, appeared against Engelsberg and said the latter did not live at the address he claimed, 1627 Center avenue, Third Ward, but at 3115 Center avenue, Fifth Ward.

Mrs. Rachel Safir, who occupies the house at 1627 Center avenue, told the Registration Commissioners that Engelsberg has lodged in her home for eight years and pays $20 a month for his room.

The commissioners who sat at the hearing were W. A. Means, T. A. Joyce and James P. Kirk.

PINCHOT ROAD PLAN UPHELD

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Oct. 25.—Belief that the township road construction program proposed by Gifford Pinchot is a practical plan and can be worked out as promised was expressed by C. H. Buchius, State Highway Department engineer, in a speech made at celebration of reopening of the Waynesburg-Rogersville road.

Buchius declared emphatically his statement was not made for political purposes, but followed careful technical study of the plan. Despite inclement weather the celebration drew a large assemblage.

'Rum Car' Drawn By Horse; Can't Annul License

MIDLAND, Pa., Oct. 25.—Chief of Police William F. Fox, Midland, is having difficulty in making the State Highway Department understand why the driver's license of Mrs. Lubie Belle, Midland, has not been revoked.

She was arrested here recently for transporting liquor, but the vehicle she was using was a buggy, drawn by an old gray horse. The Harrisburg authorities demanded the driver's license. This Woman Fat and 40 Tells How She Reduced

Her Physical Attractiveness Compels Admiration

It was this way—I was reading the evening paper and right before my eyes was an article headed "How one woman lost 47 pounds of fat in three months" and you can just bet I woke up and got interested right away.

And all this woman did to lose all that fat was to take one-half teaspoonsful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

That seemed easy to me—I was sold on Kruschen Salts and took my first dose the next morning—that was four months ago.

Well, as you can all see, my fat is gone—I've gained a shapely figure—bright eyes—clear skin—tireless energy—and I never felt better in my life.

Kruschen Salts (It's the Little Daily Dose That Does It) brings activity to mind and body—its rejuvenating influence causes the stomach, liver and bowels to do their work naturally and faultlessly.

There is nothing so good as Kruschen—(remember the name) taken every morning—it causes every organ, nerve, gland and fibre in the body to function naturally. One woman lost 19 pounds in four weeks.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at any drug store in the world.

Mrs. Betty Luedeke, of Dayton, writes: "I am using Kruschen to reduce weight—I lost 10 pounds in one week and cannot say too much to recommend it."

SOLUTION TO

'The Customs Fraud'

By ARTHUR HORL.

The door of Room 417 was opened by a tall, broad-shouldered man. He gave a short, startled exclamation as he found himself facing a number of drawn revolvers. He backed into the room with his hands aloft. There was another in the room, a shorter man with an ugly, brutish face. He, too, raised his hands aloft.

None of the intruders recognized the two men. Robin Dale remembered seeing them as they left the Ruratania. They were the two male nurses of Lloyd Simons. From an adjoining room the light laughter of a woman floated in. Dale smiled, especially as he saw there was luggage packed, ready to be taken away. He learned later that an attendant of the hotel had come for it directly after they entered the room and had been sent away.

"Mr. Whitely!" Robin Dale called.

The sounds of someone approaching the door and it opened. Alfred Whitely stepped into the room and found it impossible to retreat.

"You may come in, too, Mrs. Gambler!" Robin Dale called again.

Mrs. Gambier entered slowly, remaining behind Whitely. Dale started the explanation.

"You had us puzzled for quite a time, Whitely . . . but you just overplayed the part. You told your men too much. One of them paraphrased my expression to you. He said 'Go through with your duty and you be damned!' You probably had a laugh on me when you told them what I had said . . . but that gave me the final, clinching clue. They would have never known it unless you told them, for we were alone when my words were spoken, Mr. Whitely, or, rather, I should call you Mr. Jules Margot! For Albert Whitely is dead! He was cremated as Lloyd Simmons. The real Simmons, caretaker of your rendezvous in London, was sent away on a vacation. You did everything well, Margot, even to the toxin you gave the true Albert Whitely for a day before you and your two assistants let him die, we shall say. There are many ways to let a man die, eh, Margot? In the East a long, thin needle at the base of the skull . . . and there was Tromski. You, too, knew he was after the jewels, but he did not know of you, so it was easy to let him go overboard. You wanted no interference, especially after your first stroke had gone off so well.

"I can see you being carried on board as Albert Simmons, attended by your two nursemen here. Whitely had not time to get the jewels into the safe before you had imprisoned him in your room and immediately assumed his identity. After that, the rest was easy, until you overplayed your part.

"In a few moments you would have been on your way, with the Cardiz diamond and the gems you obtained from Grosset and Lake not an hour ago. You wanted the police here at four, when it would be too late, and it would look as if once again you had met with foul play. That first trick of foul play was clever, Margot . . . you overlooked nothing, knowing that you would be immediately suspected, you worked a scheme to lull suspicions and give you an excuse for a speedy departure. A disappearance at once would have proven your guilt and you had it nicely planned to leave without even a trace of suspicion."

Dale turned to Inspector Carlin.

"I'm sure you'll find the Cardiz diamond and the rest of the collection in the apartment. It's probably one of the few tim jewels were carried into the country in a coffin. You e, Albert Whitely's death saved more than one purpose."

Then he bowed to Mrs. Gambler. "I really was quite sincere, my dear madam, when I said I hoped to see you again."

That night Robin Dale selected his reading with great care. He was particularly interested in the stories of the beautiful women in history who had been the cause of men's downfall.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Mistake to Postpone Child's Vaccination

In speaking to a mother the other day she confided that none of her children had been vaccinated. She was afraid of the vaccination and did not consider it necessary because the disease is so infrequently met. When I told her there were cases of smallpox in the country and quite near her own community, she became quite alarmed and promised to have her children vaccinated.

DR COPELAND

Because of the extreme rareness of smallpox today, many parents are extremely careless in reference to the vaccination of their children. This is a great mistake. Persons acting on this theory are a menace to the general public health. Smallpox will never be rid of while a certain percentage of the population goes unvaccinated.

Hardly a day passes but we hear of new groups of people joining together against some cause or another. If many persons come to believe there is too much tobacco smoking, you may be assured that there will be an "anti-tobacco league." Today in this country, in spite of the tremendous advances made by science, there are many honest and well intentioned people who call themselves "anti-vaccinationists."

Personally, I am in conflict with the claims made by this group. Yet the members have much influence and, from the standpoint of science, to great harm by their propaganda. Vaccination in childhood is a simple procedure and there can be no doubt the protection given by it against smallpox is complete for from five to seven years.

Vaccination was first introduced in England by Edward Jenner in 1796. For many centuries it had been common knowledge that infection by cow-pox protected one against smallpox. He noticed this in the rural country, particularly on the farms.

One day Jenner took matter from the hand of a dairymaid who was infected with cow-pox and inoculated a young boy with it. This boy was subsequently exposed to smallpox but did not contract the disease. This was the first successful attempt at vaccination.

If everyone were vaccinated, and the vaccination were repeated at intervals not longer than seven years, smallpox would undoubtedly cease to exist as a disease. It might require a generation, but victory would come.

Why not be fair to your children and have them vaccinated at the recommended stated intervals, and surely shortly after birth? As adults they can make their own decision, but as children you must make it for them.

It requires bravery to be a good parent. No one of us likes to submit a child to pain and even the most remote danger of any sort. But each of us must take the long view. We must think of the future and not be governed by the present.

Smallpox is a dreadful ailment and no chances must be taken regarding it. It is a comfortable feeling to know that vaccination is a reliable preventive of this dread disease.

Forbes

Tire Shortage Is Predicted. Better Signs

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes

MOST ENCOURAGING is the business-like way unemployment hardships are at last being faced by American leaders. Industry and finance are finally taking steps calculated to convince the unemployed that callousness does not exist in high places. When a man of the caliber of Seward Prosser undertakes to line up finance, industry, business to grapple with the problem of relief, and when President Hoover enlists the services of so capable an organizer as Col. Arthur Woods, as well as the energetic Governor Meyer of the Federal Reserve Board, and when important cities set about marshaling their most responsible citizens, the winter's prospects become distinctly less alarming, distinctly more encouraging.

In addition to the extremely valuable, practical work which unquestionably will be done, the psychological effect of the aroused interest manifested in the highest circles cannot but be most salutary.

In short, the outlook for this winter has been and is being incalculably improved.

STRAWS CONTINUE to show that trade winds are beginning to blow more favorably in a goodly number of directions. Evidence increases that the bottom was touched last month. The change is not yet pronounced enough to warrant positive conclusions that a general upturn will be maintained. But, at least, more hopeful signs are daily appearing.

THIS COLUMN is still receiving complaints from shoppers that stocks on hand are awkwardly scanty. Also, statements are made that store forces have been reduced so drastically that tip-top service is not always available. One reader gives three personal experiences. He says, in part:

"I walked into a leading clothing store to buy a hat. One clerk was busy with another customer and there was no other clerk. I was asked to wait. I did, for about five minutes, when I strolled into another department of this store where tuxedos, etc., were on display. For another four or five minutes no clerk even approached me. I walked out. In another large department store I was amazed at the few clerks there. They seemed rushed to death and naturally unable to properly consider the wants of buyers."

PRESIDENT WILLIAM O'NEIL, of the General Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, predicts a severe shortage in automobile tires next spring. He tells me:

"American tire manufacturers will not have enough tires to deliver next spring. Only one and one-half tires per car in use have been sold this year, which means that the spare tire has been keeping the cars running. Statistics of the Rubber Association of America indicate that manufacturers' stocks are at least 1,500,000 below last year. After the first of the year, rubber manufacturers are going to find themselves unprepared to take care of the demand the approach of spring is bound to develop. Government reports on an October census of tire dealer stocks show eight tires less per dealer than a year ago, or between 500,000 and 750,000 fewer tires in total dealer stocks."

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, of the Cleveland Trust Company, says:

"A real tire shortage appears to be in the making, and it seems probable that the fortunes of the tire companies in 1931 will be far better than they have been this year."

PRESIDENT GEORGE T. COCHRANE, of the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance Company, now visiting New York, is disgusted with the extreme pessimism prevailing in the East. He remarked to me:

"There is too much whining and not enough hustling, too much cutting down and not enough expanding of sales effort. This is no time to reduce sales forces, to reduce advertising or any other constructive endeavor. Every conceivable art should be employed to increase business. Weakly resign yourself to depression and you will experience depression.

"Our own new life insurance written is 17 per cent ahead of the first nine months of last year. Sixty-three of our 85 offices, located in 43 states, show gains over last year. Each month this year has been better than the same month last year.

"Why, even here in the East our business is running ahead. Our Newark, N. J., office, for example, has done 300 per cent of its quota. Our chief representative there told me, 'Times are hard, everybody tells you, but we are simply working day and night and doing more business than ever before.'

"That's the right spirit, that's the surest road to renewed prosperity. It can be done, as our records prove."

EVEN THE STOCK market appears to have made up its mind that better times are setting in. You can never tell what Wall Street will do from one day to another. But that it will step up and stay up one of these days is a foregone conclusion.

Weather Delays Planting in Argentina

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Unseasonably cold weather and frost in some districts of Argentina during the week ended October 11, has made the general crop outlook less promising and has further delayed the late spring planting, according to a cablegram received in the Department of Commerce from James G. Burke, acting commercial attache in Buenos Aires. Due to the large number of applications for farm and land mortgages the National Mortgage Bank is considering the issuance of a new 50,000,000 paper pesos ($25,000,000) of credit.

CITY BRIDGE FINISHED

This structure, 1,510 feet long, representing an outlay of approximately $1,000,000, connecting Charles street and Essen street, and spanning East street, on the North Side, was recently completed by Booth and Flinn Company, Ltd., doing the sub-structure work, and the Independent Bridge Company, the steel work. Easy access to the downtown section from City View via Perrysville avenue is now possible and a large acreage in the City View section is opened to development.

Local products were used in this structure, involving large quantities of steel, sand, gravel and concrete. The concrete was made with "Green Bag Cement," manufactured by Davison Coke and Iron Company, one of Pittsburgh's comparatively young industries, and is a high quality product outstanding in its field for the plasticity and ultimate structural strength it imparts to concrete. This and other projects of similar character have done much to keep local labor employed.

REPORTS GAIN IN BUILDING ACTIVITY

New Construction Started In Pittsburgh Territory Rises During September

New construction started in the Pittsburgh territory (Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky) in September reached a total of $38,238,000 as against $37,870,400 for August and $70,200,700 for September of last year, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. The September, 1930, record showed $16,913,000 for non-residential buildings, $13,710,700 for public works and utilities, and $7,614,300 for residential buildings.

Of the non-residential total, $7,332,200 was for industrial plants, $3,280,500 was for commercial buildings, $2,836,100 was for educational buildings and $3,464,200 for all other non-residential types of construction. Contracts awarded for new building and engineering work in this territory during the past nine months amounted to $461,231,000 while the total for the corresponding nine months of 1929 was $553,832,700.

September construction contracts in Western Pennsylvania totaled $8,825,300 as compared with $9,820,100 for August and $13,513,700 for September of last year. Included in last month's construction record were $4,536,100 for non-residential buildings, $2,186,200 for residential buildings and $2,103,000 for public works and utilities. New building and engineering work started in Western Pennsylvania during the first nine months of this year amounted to $11,916,700 while the total for the corresponding nine months of 1929 was $150,110,700.

OHIO SHOWS GAIN

The State of Ohio had $23,595,000 in contracts for new building and engineering work during the past month. The above figure compares with $22,067,500 for August and $48,377,600 for September of last year. The September, 1930, record showed $11,171,300 for non-residential projects, $7,543,600 for public works and utilities, and $4,880,100 for residential buildings. Since the year opened there has been $253,885,700 worth of contracts awarded for new construction work in Ohio against $321,129,600 for the corresponding period of a year ago.

Contracts let for new construction work during September in Kentucky totaled $3,758,100 as compared with $3,741,700 for August and $3,707,600 for September, 1929. Included in the past month's record were $2,662,100 for public works and utilities, $861,500 for non-residential buildings and $234,500 for residential buildings. During the past nine months there was $38,019,700 worth of new construction work started in Kentucky against $36,899,000 for the corresponding nine months of 1929.

BUSINESS INDEX LOWER

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Undismayed by the indecision of business leadership, financial conservatism, and the confusion of political cross-currents here and abroad, the fundamental though blind forces of human needs are again slowly laying the basis for future recovery in American business, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today.

As the decline in the business index from 87.1 per cent to 84.7 per cent for the week ending October 18, suggests, the general measure of gradual improvement are wavering and confused, yet many favorable factors are to be seen beneath the surface. The mass of final buyers are more keenly alive to bargain values offered by energetic merchandisers than are manufacturers who are offered the lowest raw material prices in many years. Consumption eats steadily into supplies as industrial production lags. Even in building the clear signs of revival in residential construction indicates that the ultimate consumer is in the market in many sections of the country. Despite political uncertaintities abroad, foreign users of American cotton recognize that this basic material is cheap and, with praiseworthy assistance from American financial sources, are buying it abundantly.

Chicago Reserve Rate Unchanged

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Following the meeting of directors of Chicago Federal Reserve Bank, no announcement was made regarding the rediscount rate, which is 3½ per cent.

BANK DEBITS DECLINE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—For the week ended October 18, 1930, bank debits outside New York City showed declines from both the preceding week and the corresponding week in 1929. Total loans and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks, although slightly greater than a week ago, were lower than in 1929. Interest rates on time money were higher than the previous week, while call rates showed no change. Both rates were lower than a year ago.

Prices for representative stocks receded from their level of the week ended October 11, 1930, and also were lower than in the corresponding period in 1929. Bond prices showed a fractional decline from the preceding week, but were considerably higher than prices paid in 1929. Business failures as reported by R. G. Dun & Co. were less numerous than in the preceding week.

The wholesale price index as compiled by Irving Fisher, representing prices of 120 commodities, showed but slight change from the week of October 11. As compared with the week of October 19, 1929, a marked decline was noted.

Claude Neon Lights Elects Directors

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—William B. Joyce, chairman National Surety Company; Stanley F. Hamlin, of White & Case, and Frederick Attwood, vice president Ohio Brass Company, have been elected additional directors of Claude Neon Lights, Inc., bringing membership of the board up to 14.

STEEL OUTPUT UNCHANGED IN WEEK

Sharp Gain in Production Seen for First of 1931; Prices Are Stationary

By B. E. V. LUTY.

Steel production this week has been at about last week's rate and less than 10 per cent under the July rate. Such a loss is fully accounted for by the general state of trade. The rate in ingots is about 52 per cent of January 1 capacity or around 50 per cent of present capacity. In tonnage, not percentage of capacity, the rate is not a remarkably low one, for it is nearly 50 per cent above the lowest rate in the 1924 dip and only 15 to 20 per cent under the average rate in the second half of 1927. The unfavorable attendant point is the condition of business generally, not promising a rapid recovery.

A time of year and a state of affairs have been reached making prognostications as to steel much less hazardous than usual. Substantially all precedents together with present conditions indicate that there will be some further decrease in steel demand and production to the end of the year and then a sharp upturn beginning with the first of the new year and continuing for some time, perhaps three months. These would be seasonal variations and the upturn would be no proof as to what would occur in the remainder of 1931.

FRESH START

In eight of the last 10 years steel production has decreased late in the year, exceptions being 1922 and 1924 when sharp recoveries were in progress. December production has varied widely year by year while first quarter production has varied much less. Somehow consumers make some sort of a fresh start when a new year comes. There is no reason to suppose next year will be an exception far any conceivable bad influence would already have been felt fully before the close of the year.

Finished steel prices just now may be regarded as stationary, the market not being engaged in growing stronger or weaker as to prices. Only few declines, and slight at that, have been recorded since September 1. The relatively low operating rate sends costs up in most cases and sellers are much more resistant to declining tendencies than formerly. Some of the prices current are quite unprofitable; nails, sheets and strips being conspicuous examples. Rails, bars, shapes and plates are profitable.

LIGHTER RAIL BUYING

The official report of fabricated structural steel bookings in September is quite unfavorable, showing 168,000 tons or 36 per cent decrease from the average of the eight preceding months, which had hung together quite closely. Shipments of the shops are given at 260,000 tons, or only 8 per cent decrease from their eight-month average. A single month, however, is not conclusive.

Booking reported in the trade this week were unusually heavy, after five rather light weeks. The fabricating shops had a large order book January 1, representing perhaps five months of work. In nine months their bookings fell short of their shipments by only 10 per cent, representing less than one month of work.

In the present annual rail buying movement orders reported to date with name of buyer specified total about 250,000 tons, or considerably less than at this date in other years, this being due in small part to roads that have bought taking somewhat smaller tonnages than in other years, and in large part to action being slower. Three roads available for comparison have ordered 13 per cent less than a year ago and about 20 per cent less than either two or three years ago, their purchases having been about 205,000 tons in 1927 and 1928, and about 165,000 tons this year.

OUTLOOK FOR FLAT GLASS IMPROVES

Current Volume of Sales Is Expected to Hold Throughout November

With window glass demand improved over three months ago and plate glass prospects brighter, the flat glass industry comes to the final quarter of the year in much better condition than it entered the final half of the year three months ago. Improvement, however, was to be expected because October and November always have been the months of greatest activity in shipments of glass for building purposes, according to American Glass Review.

While the improvement this year falls below the average of the past five years, the fact that there has been any improvement is taken as a good sign. It is believed that the current volume of business will continue through November, after which the usual decline in demand is expected.

SHIPMENTS GAIN

Window glass sales continue slightly above the average of the previous two weeks with shipments probably in excess of current production. Distributors are demanding prompt shipments and factories generally are able to meet this request, although factory stocks are at the lowest total of the year. While manufacturers would like to see a much better demand, they feel they should be content as long as it does not decline. They see a hopeful sign in the fact that distributors' stocks are low and that most distributors have to buy promptly. There is no speculative buying, and this, too, is seen as a favorable sign.

Demand for plate glass has increased in the past week and inquiries are more numerous than they have been for some time. This is a reflection of more activity in automobile body building coupled with seasonal demand for plate glass for building purposes and mirrors. Rough rolled and wire glass, too, is moving better than a month ago.

Trade Deflation Near End, Leaders Say

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE WATER HAS BEEN SQUEEZED out of business. This summarizes the statements made yesterday by three of the outstanding men in the business world—Schwab, Farrell and Raskob.

One year after the big break in stocks, which accompanied the slump in business activity, these three leaders have declared that inflation of industrial activity has come to a close and that business is now in a condition of excessive deflation.

While little hope of any marked improvement in the present year was held out, the remarks of all three indicated confidence in the belief that the turn will take place early next year.

As an encouraging note for Pittsburgh, Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said that the steel industry will lead industrial recovery.

Raskob Sees Gains

JOHN J. RASKOB of General Motors made an extremely interesting analysis of his industry. He pointed out that there is a normal world market for about 4,500,000 motor vehicles of American manufacture annually. In 1929 the industry produced over 1,000,000 cars in excess of this amount. In 1930 with a reduction of about 2,000,000 vehicles as compared with a year ago the industry will have produced about 1,000,000 cars less than the estimated normal.

In analyzing these estimates Raskob stated that a shortage in the automobile market has been created. The longer buyers remain out of the market from now on the sharper will be the recovery when it does set in.

Price Cutting Attacked

JAMES A. FARRELL, president of the United States Steel Corporation, forcefully emphasized the outstanding weakness of the steel trade when he stated that it would be possible to get the industry back where it belongs within 60 days if proper co-operation were available.

The steel makers, like other industries, are suffering from reduced consumer demand, but this is not their greatest difficulty. The principal reason for declines in steel earnings is lower prices. These lower prices result primarily from the price cutting tactics of many organizations in the business.

No Wage Cuts

FARRELL REITERATED the fact that price cutting never really gets any business. It may secure isolated orders but in the long run it only results in similar action by competitors which causes losses to the entire industry.

The steel mills after a year of price cutting competition, are working at only about 53 per cent of capacity. They have not added a single ton to their output by reducing quotations. In fact, Farrell maintains that the mills should be working at about 70 per cent of capacity at present and actually would be working at this rate if they had taken a firm stand on prices.

There was general agreement among these business leaders that wages should not be reduced.

LOOKS FOR BIG HOLIDAY TRADE

Perhaps one of the most interesting shops of its kind in this section of the country is the Church Supply Shop located in the Jenkin's Arcade and operated by Miss Ella J. Letzkus, who started the business 18 years ago, when it was considered quite unusual for a woman to embark upon a business career. From a small shop the institution has grown so that several large supply rooms in addition to the display room on the second floor are deeded to take care of the stock.

Miss Letzkus supplies vestries, books, statuary, beads, prayer books, Bibles, pictures and dozens of other commodities to churches in the Pittsburgh district principally, in addition to occasional orders in distant parts of the United States and in foreign countries.

Miss Letzkus is making extensive plans for the holiday season. She has just received a large shipment of holiday greeting cards and Christmas remembrances in the church supply line.

Commerce Body Favors Trade Practice

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—Maintenance of commodity exchange trade as an essential method of the efficient marketing of agricultural products was indorsed through a referendum vote of the constituent organization members of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

By a vote of 2,687 to 111 trading in commodities on exchanges was supported. The recommendation that intelligent and wisely regulated speculative buying and selling on commodity exchanges should be supported as a necessary factor in the economic distribution of agricultural products, was favored by a vote of 2,580 to 199.

HECTIC YEAR IN WHEAT MARKET

Cash Grain Sold This Month at Lowest Price Since 1907 'Money Panic'

Unsettlement in the grain markets this year places 1930 among the most hectic periods ever experienced in the trade. The low price so far recorded on cash wheat in 1930, 75¼ cents, this month, had not been duplicated since the "money panic" year, 1907, when it sold at 71 cents a bushel.

William O. Forker, grain specialist for A. E. Masten & Co., has compiled a table of high and low cash wheat prices for each year back to the beginning of the Civil War, 1861. According to this compilation, the lowest price at which cash wheat sold in that time was 50 cents, in September, 1894.

The highest at which cash wheat ever sold was $3.50 a bushel in December, 1917, at the crest of the World War. The highest price of the Civil War period was $2.85 a bushel in 1867, in the era of depreciated currency which followed that conflict.

During the period of the government's intervention in the wheat trade in the World War years, the prices shown in the following table represented bids in the market for particular grades of wheat which could be had for cash but not on future trading. The high and low prices and the months in which they were established are given:

Prices Cut

SAMUEL COHEN

PRICES CUT ON UMBRELLAS

Declining commodity prices, which have given consumers exceptional buying opportunities in most products, have been particularly pronounced in the umbrella trade, where most retail prices have been practically cut in half during the past year.

This summary of the industry's position was made by Samuel Cohen, who operates the only exclusive umbrella shop in the State of Pennsylvania and one of the few institutions of its kind to remain in existence in the entire country.

The business, established in 1848 as John W. Tim & Son, is now conducted under the name of Sam's Umbrella Shop at 635 Penn avenue.

Mr. Cohen stated that the organization has remained in business for 82 years in spite of the many changes during that period because of the fact that it has always concentrated efforts on its specialty, and has been able to offer its customers a more complete line and a greater amount of service in its repair shop than competitors.

Rayon Production Sets New Record

Preliminary census of manufactures tabulations show that the total shipments or deliveries of rayon by manufacturers last year amounted to 116,492,554 pounds, valued at $140,811,345, an increase of 54.2 per cent in quantity and 32.3 per cent in value as compared with 75,555,439 pounds, valued at $106,468,752, made in 1927. Products allied to rayon (sheets, straw, horsehair, etc.) were also reported to the value of $8,465,142, an increase of 147.5 per cent as compared with $3,419,584 for 1927.

LOCAL TRADE ACTIVITY GAINS

Increased Demand Creates More Optimistic Feeling Among Large Jobbers

Unusually cold weather for this season of the year has resulted in a more active demand for seasonal merchandise this week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. While orders for the most part were small, they have nevertheless been sufficiently numerous to create a more optimistic feeling among the jobbers of drygoods and wearing apparel. Retailers of men's and women's clothing report a more active demand, and while business as a whole is not in as large volume as a year ago, it is nevertheless at a higher rate than has prevailed heretofore this fall.

Demand for shoes is somewhat stronger, and there is slightly more activity in the leather trade, the movement of which, however, still continues slow. Demand for building materials shows no particular improvement, and demand for lumber is not very strong, with prices still rather unsatisfactory. A moderate increase in demand is noted for jewelry, but the volume of sales continues lower than a year ago.

COLLECTIONS PICK UP

Demand for plumbing supplies and heating equipment shows a slight improvement. There is a light demand for electrical fixtures, sales continuing quite materially below normal, while demand for radio equipment is showing a moderate increase.

Production of crude oil shows a slight increase, and there have been some reductions in the price of gasoline. The production of bituminous coal is at a slightly higher rate, although the total production is averaging about 15 per cent lower than it was a year ago. There is a stronger demand for domestic sizes, but there appears to be an over-production of slack.

Slowness continues to dominate the local collection situation, although a slight improvement is reported by some jobbers.

Continental, an investment company sponsored by Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, and Otis & Company, of Cleveland, acquired 394,907 shares of united class B common stock. This amount was said to be a part of Continental's recent $56,000,000 worth of investments.

Continental now has 416,412 shares of the united class B, or about 40 per cent of the voting stock, enough, it is said, to give it control and to place it among the important utility holding companies of the United States.

Financing of the additional stock was arranged through a long-term banking loan, which, it was said, was at a favorable rate to Continental.

4 GIVEN TERMS IN HOLDUP

George Tomachsky, 19, of 324 Island avenue, McKees Rocks, today began serving a term of 5 to 10 years in the Western penitentiary, following his plea of guilty in Criminal Court to leading the holdup of Alexander Giosasis' restaurant at 708 East Diamond street October 15. Tomachsky admitted he pointed a gun at the proprietor while a companion took $30 from the cash register.

Charles Roman, 19, of 2 Thompson avenue, McKees Rocks, was sentenced 18 to 36 months in the workhouse. It was his first offense, while Tomachsky had served time before. Two other youths who remained in a car outside were given lighter penalties by the sentencing jurist, Judge George V. Moore. Virgil Toney, 18, of 18 Pritchard street, McKees Rocks, was sent to jail for six to 12 months and John Roman, 17, brother of Charles, was sent to Huntingdon reformatory.

Social Workers' Club Hears Pleas for Aged

Abraham Epstein, national secretary of the American Association for Old Age Security, told members of the Social Workers' Club of Pittsburgh in Trinity Parish House last night, that it costs more to keep aged dependents in alshouses than to pay old-age pensions.

Even in periods of prosperity, he said, the majority of workers lead a hand-to-mouth existence, and are not able to save for their old age. Present means for providing for old people who are dependent on assistance are antiquated, costly and inadequate, he concluded.

Attorney G.H.Quaill, Ill for Week, Dies

Attorney George H. Quaill, 75, died unexpectedly in his home, 58 Howard street, Bellevue, this morning. He had been ill for a week, according to his associate, Attorney Arthur B. McBride, but continued his practice until Friday.

Mr. Quaill, born in Ross Township, had been a resident in the North borough all his life. He was admitted to the bar in 1879. Mr. Quaill was prominent in Masonic orders.

'Charity Solicitor' Suspect Fined $25

Testimony of a dozen victims who said they had been mulcted of money by an alleged magazine and charity solicitor, resulted in his being fined $25 or 30 days to jail before Magistrate John J. Sweeney today in North Side Police Court. He was arrested on complaint of J. E. Gibson, a merchant of the North Side market. A dozen victims said that the suspect, Frank E. Haley, 29, of the Hotel Savoy, procured sums of money from them.

Alimony Victim, 77, Must Stay in Jail

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—William Hudson Donald, 77, described as the oldest man ever to be sued for alimony, has lost his plea for freedom. He was returned to the county jail yesterday to serve the remainder of a six-month sentence imposed September 3, after his attorneys had made a vain attempt to obtain his release on the ground he needed medical attention.

Raleigh Auditorium Destroyed by Fire

RALEIGH, N. C., Oct. 25.—(AP.)—The Raleigh Auditorium, with a seating capacity of 3,200, was destroyed by fire with an estimated loss of $125,000.

The Auditorium was part of a large building that also housed Raleigh City Hall and jail. Prisoners were removed to the county jail.

Man Refuses Rum Given Back by U. S. Court

John Crnkovic, of 820 East Ohio street, refused to accept 77 pints of genuine whisky offered by government prohibition agents.

They delivered the whisky and had to take it back because Crnkovic declined to take possession.

It was part of a large quantity of liquor ordered returned by the Federal District Court, because it had been seized illegally.

His reason for refusing the whisky was due to the fact that last Tuesday, after other liquors were returned to him by agents, a constable and state police immediately seized the supply and arrested him.

The 77 pints had not been returned with the other liquor on account of being held for chemical analysis. The chemist found it genuine, but had been cut, it was said.

SLOAN DRUMS UP BUSINESS FOR FIRM

General Motors President Takes Salesman's Kit and Goes on Road With Grant

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Instead of sitting passively at his sheltered desk to watch the business curves, Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of the General Motors Corporation, has taken a salesman's kit and gone on the road to try to help make the business curves rise.

Believing that selling is the biggest job before his company at the present time, he has temporarily left production, finance and other executive problems to his associates, and devoted his own energies to traveling around to boost sales. He is accompanied by R. H. Grant, vice president in charge of sales and master salesman of the industry, whose part in heightening Chevrolet sales a few years ago revolutionized the industry and made the best selling competing model obsolete.

M. S. Rukeyser

The Advertising Trade reports that the Sloan-Grant tour is the forerunner of increased advertising appropriations for 1931. This year the company has spent around $15,000,000.

Mr. Sloan has set a fine example for other chief executives. Others have been doing too much sitting tight. In the face of general underconsumption, what is plainly needed is some intensive two-fisted selling—selling through personal contacts and through the printed word.

FIGHT DEPRESSION

Printer's Ink, advertising weekly, has examined the reasons for the success of a selected group of depression-proof companies, whose performance in beating last year's profit record has already been reported in this column.

Apparently the companies which have been resisting the tides of depression are those which have been unwilling to follow the crowd into despondency and retrenchment. Asked how he succeeded in showing increased earnings, C. M. Chester, Jr., president, General Foods Corporation, replied:

"Introduction of new products, improved packing and lower prices have helped to maintain the volume of our case sales. Advertising has been continued on a large scale equivalent to last year."

Eversley Childs, president, the Bon Ami Company, revealed:

"Stated briefly, we attribute the record made so far this year by the Bon Ami Company to certain economies in factory and general operations, to the sizable increase in our advertising appropriation, and to increased sales effort."

Likewise, Milton Dammann, president, American Safety Razor Corporation, said:

"We did not stint our advertising outlay."

TO INCREASE 'ADS'

R. W. Bell, general manager, A. P. W. Paper Company, disclosed:

"At the present time we are running a very modest newspaper campaign in 31 cities throughout the country. We expect slowly to augment this advertising with larger space and over greater territory as well as by use of direct mail. This advertising, however, has not been running long enough to have an opportunity to greatly help our sales."

The spirit of defeatism and retrenchment on the part of a large number of duller witted business executives give men with courage, vision, and initiative an extraordinarily fine opportunity to increase their relative importance in their respective industries at this time. Out of the recession, there will ensue a redistribution of the laurels of business progress.

Meantime, those with the daring to be affirmative are not only, as in the case of at least four-score large companies, boosting profits for their stockholders, but are also helping the general economic situation by contributing to the relief of the evil of underconsumption, which has disturbed the economic equilibrium.

"RIOTOUS SAVING"

That heterodox pair of economists, William Trufant Foster and Waddill Catchings, cast verbal shots at well-to-do people who in this crisis are engaged in "riotous saving." With the country suffering from underconsumption they contend that it needs on the whole more spending for consumption goods, and less saving for production goods. Warning that there are still a million Americans who because of personal circumstances should spend less and save more, they fling a challenge at conventional thrift notions, so far as the affluent are concerned.

These new school economists ask in the forthcoming Atlantic Monthly:

"What about those who have already saved enough money to provide for themselves, for the rest of their lives, with several times the income of the average family?"

"If such persons really want to help their country, the best thing they can do, right now, is to spend more money; right now, when business is 10 per cent below normal, because buyers are scarce; and when, for the same reason $10,000,000,000 worth of savings in the form of capital facilities is being wasted, and jobs appear to be scarcer than they were even in the major depression of a decade ago. If the well-to-do cannot spend more money prudently on themselves or their employes, they will find, in the next mail, plenty of opportunities to spend it on others.

"When, under this condition, people save more money, they are wasting the substance of the country in riotous saving.

"The money you save will be used to finance production; but, for the most part, production has no trouble in getting itself financed. The money you spend for goods finances consumption; and just now consumption is having trouble getting itself financed."

Magma Copper Company Not Likely to Cut Dividend

Indications now are that there will be no change in Magma Copper Company's dividend at the coming meeting of directors. The last quarterly payment was 75 cents. Magma is making money on present price of copper, although hardly enough to pay $3 annually since production has been curtailed to less than 30,000,000 pounds annually. The last quarterly report showed a production cost of 7.83 cents a pound. Before depreciation the cost was between 6 and 6½ cents a pound. At the close of the year Magma had $3,947,966 cash and marketable securities on hand, equal to about $9.67 a share on 408,155 no par shares outstanding. Magma has no bonds. At $20 a share the entire Magma capitalization has a market valuation of $18,163,100, less than the cost of the railroad and mill.

While it is probable that some of the old-time favorites will lead again when the general market turns upward, it is pointed out by some observers that not all the former popular shares will be among the features. Many of the stocks which led the market in past years did not hold a good position in the last bull market, which ended about a year ago. Therefore, past performances marketwise may not be a good basis on which to buy certain stocks, because of changed conditions.

Considerable of the decline which occurred in Texas Company earlier this week was due to liquidation by those who have been disappointed because of the situation in the oil industry. The most persistent selling, however, came when stop orders were uncovered on sharp reactions. When the stock was declining, rumors of a dividend reduction were circulated widely, but they were without foundation, as an official statement was issued predicting the maintenance of the rate. Similar unfavorable rumors about dividends frequently have been circulated concerning other issues when the price was declining as a result of necessitous liquidation and pressure from the shorts.

When attention is given again to the buying side of the market, it is likely that facts will govern and displace the fancies which appeared to rule when stocks were being carried to abnormally high levels. Several commission houses report that clients who have been in a position to buy stocks for cash are disregarding the extent of the decline as an influence, and are giving careful consideration to such factors as the position of the company in an industry, the condition in that industry, the management, the record of earnings and dividends in the past, probable future earnings, and the yield to be obtained on the investment.

One of the leading commission houses points out that Bethlehem Steel 7 per cent preferred should interest investors who are seeking high-grade senior issues. At recent selling levels, the yield of the stock has been better than 5½ per cent. Preferred dividend requirements were earned five times in the first half of the current year. While revenues have decreased since the beginning of the third quarter, the margin of earnings over dividend requirements of the senior stock still is high. At the end of last year, Bethlehem had cash or the equivalent totaling $95,000,000, or slightly below the par value of the 1,000,000 preferred shares outstanding. One of the advantages of the issue is that it is non-callable.

One banker of considerable experience, who has been quite bearish for many months, now finds he can look at things in a little different light, particularly the stock market. At the same time, however, he makes it plain that he sees no reason for expecting anything in the way of a broad or sustained upward movement immediately. Rather he is simply convinced that heavy liquidation has run its course and that such sharp reactions as may develop in the future will very likely provide favorable opportunities for picking up sound seasoned dividend paying stocks. He sees the market as likely to prove a more two-sided affair for a while yet, with stocks that have not been thoroughly deflated destined to find their proper levels, while shares of corporations that have been unreasonably depressed are feeling the influence of well directed buying.

TRUSCON'S CASH DIVIDEND EARNED

Profit for Nine Months Amply Meets Year's Needs; Stock Increase Approved

YOUNGSTOWN, Oct. 25.—Truscon Steel Company's earnings for the nine months ended September 30, exceeded $1.60 a share on 658,154 common shares. In the first nine months of 1929 the company earned $3.39 a share on 618,179 shares.

The company's recent action in increasing its authorized common stock to 1,000,000 shares, from 700,000, was taken in preparation for carrying on its policy of declaring frequent stock dividends for its common shareholders.

Since 1926 annual dividends of 6 per cent in stock have been paid in addition to cash dividends of $1.20 annually on the common (par $10).

FINE DIVIDEND RECORD

There have been rumors that Truscon officials had other plans in view in increasing its authorized common capital, in addition to the one of providing for future stock dividends. One report suggested that rights to part of the increased stock might be offered common shareholders and the funds thus raised used for expansion purposes.

Truscon has paid cash dividends on the common uninterruptedly for 20 years.

SEASONAL SWINGS

The company is an important manufacturer of fabricated steel used in highways, automobiles, buildings and various other consuming industries and its highly diversified output is likely to hold its earnings at a fairly profitable level during the period in which steel companies and steel fabricators generally are being hard pressed to show profits.

Truscon's business, however, is subject to broad seasonal swings, and operations already are tapering downward from the capacity production schedules of July and August. The second and third quarters of the year are the most profitable for Truscon.

LOW MONEY A FACTOR

A continuance of the lower money rates will have a beneficial effect on the company's business, particularly with regard to building construction.

Net profit for the company in the six months ended June 30 was $732,185, or 92 cents a share on 658,154 common shares outstanding. Earnings during the first quarter were only 10 cents a share, since the company's products used for highway and building construction are less in demand during that period.

Power Production Off in Sepetmber

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The power output of the electric subsidiaries of the American Water Works and Electric Company for September totaled 149,495,912 kilowatt hours, a decrease of 6 per cent from the output of 153,643,843 kilowatt hours for the corresponding month of 1929.

For the nine months ended September 30, 1930, power output totaled 1,408,885,215 kilowatt hours, 1 per cent less than the output of 1,425,485,759 kilowatt hours for the same period last year.

Jersey Standard Units Curtailing

Timken Detroit Co. Reduces Prices

DETROIT, Oct. 25.—Timken Detroit Company, subsidiary of Timken Detroit Axle Company, has reduced prices on all oil burner models approximately $90.

Safeway Stores To Earn $5 Share

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Present indications are Safeway Stores, Inc., for the current year will show net earnings of $5 or better a share available for common dividend, according to M. B. Skaggs, president.

The outlook for the company has brightened considerably recently.

COLGATE SALES EXPANDING ABROAD

All Foreign Units Will Show Profit for Current Year; Plants Well Located

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Foreign business of the Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co., which accounted for a substantial part of its total sales of $100,560,688 last year, will be an important factor in the showing made for the year ending December 31, 1930. Colgate is rapidly expanding its facilities in the foreign field.

All of the company's foreign units will show a net profit for the current calendar year and their combined net profit will be substantially in excess of that reported for last year. While foreign operations as a whole last year resulted in a substantial net profit, some of the units reported an operating loss and 1930 is the first year in which all units will have been operated on a profitable basis.

Palmolive manufactures its Palmolive soap, Palmolive rapid-shave cream and dental cream in its own plants in Australia, Canada, Cuba and Mexico. In Argentine, Belgium, Denmark, England, France, Germany, Italy and Sweden, the company has contracted with local manufacturers to make these products under its own brands, formulae and supervision. In addition, the company manufactures and sells dental cream in Brazil.

Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Company has its manufacturing plants so located as to enable it to sell in neighboring countries in spite of existing tariff walls, so that it now is the largest seller of toilet soap in 48 different countries. Present plans call for further expansion of selling and manufacturing facilities such as the entrance into the manufacturing field in countries which have developed sufficient business to warrant this step and are now being served through export channels.

What Was This Royal Woman's Amazing Secret

MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS, the most tragic and fascinating figure in British history—her life more dramatic than any play or novel. Her misfortunes, her intrigues, her romances and the final tragedy of her beheading have never ceased to occupy historians.

Of all the dramatic episodes of her life, the murder of her second husband, Henry Stuart, Lord Darnley, is the most mysterious. What was the real cause and manner of Darnley's death? Did Queen Mary authorize it? Historians are greatly interested in new and startling facts unearthed by one of the most noted eugenists of England. Remarkable events that led to her beheading, plots and counterplots of unscrupulous nobles struggling for control of the kingdom. Every student of history should read the astonishing facts—next Sunday in The American Weekly.

What About Eternal Punishment for Sinners?

"Everlasting Life," "Eternal Punishment"—during many centuries preachers have built up a complicated system of burning and torture to be endured by the majority of the earth's inhabitants. Preachers employed every science—medicine, chemistry, astronomy—to fill out the details of existence in Hades—a subject that is one of the most astonishing in the history of religion. And now some of the most famous ministers here and abroad are preaching an entirely different gospel. Read about it next Sunday in The American Weekly.

What Do You Know About Mosquitoes?

Do you know what the mosquito eats when there's nobody to bite? We think mosquitoes are a summer pest—yet the biggest mosquitoes are to be found in the Arctic. Everybody knows that they "breed in water"—yet there are plenty of them in the world's driest deserts. Science has focussed its ingenuity upon the study of these insects—they have been tamed, fed and studied while eating, singing, love-making and breeding. The results obtained by scientists are remarkable and they make interesting reading—next Sunday in The American Weekly.

Is Marriage a Lottery?

Of course there are thousands of happily married couples. But there are some recent and startling instances here and there around the country that demonstrate the truth of the old proverb, "Marriage is a Lottery." You be the judge, after reading the details of queer impulses and strange antics of matrimonial partners in mansion and cottage. You'll discover something new in cave-man tactics: Next Sunday in The American Weekly.

PITT FACES NOTRE DAME

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Irish to Lose Stars.
Hooper May Be Pilot.
New Play Near Sideline.
American Hockey Trend.
Pitt-Tartan Yearlings.
Big Colt Offer Refused.

GRADUATION WILL HIT ROCKNE'S TEAM

NOTRE DAME'S great football team will lose a lot of its present strength before another season rolls around. A number of the outstanding stars whose brilliant playing has been mainly responsible for the success of Knute Rockne's 1930 combination will close their college gridiron careers at the end of this campaign and pass out of the picture by graduation. The departing luminaries will be headed by Joe Savoldi, iron fullback; Frank Carideo, heavy quarterback, and Tom Conley, captain and crack end.

Joe Savoldi.

Thus at one stroke the Irish will lose three of the country's foremost gridders—a fullback who has so few superiors as a ball carrier; a quarterback second to none in generalship or playing ability, and an end who compares in prowess with any wingman in the game. In addition, Rockne will be deprived of the services of Tom Kassis, regular guard; Larry (Moon) Mullins, fullback; George Vik, Jack Carberry and John O'Brien, ends; Paul O'Connor, halfback; Norman Hewitt, guard, and Frank Leahy and Richard Donoghue, tackles. This is only Marty Brill's second year at Notre Dame, but a previous chapter at Penn may keep him from playing next season.

THOSE PLAYERS REPRESENT a heap of football power and the loss would be heavy enough to wreck any average team. But in all probability Notre Dame's seemingly endless supply of material will speedily fill their places and the Irish will go right on setting a dizzy pace for the remainder of the pigskin world. They lost George Gipp and they lost Paul Castner, but along came Elmer and then up bobbed Savoldi.

A big gap yawned when Gus Dorais passed out, but in later years Harry Stuhldreher was developed to lead the nation's quarterbacks, and now Carideo is shining at the post. The Millers and Crowleys, Brandys and Elders, Walshes and Cannons Moynihans and Twomeys, all were replaced sooner or later by men who kept up the great reputation of the South Bend university. Rockne himself has had a string of brilliant successors at end. Holes in the team do not exist long at Notre Dame. Nearly always there's a new star in the making for the vacancy. And the Irish go right on winning. It's football's greatest parade.

AMONG THE LATEST possibilities mentioned for the managership of the Boston Red Sox is Harry Hooper, former star outfielder of that club. Hooper is a warm favorite in Boston, as was shown on the occasion of the recent oldtimers' game there, when he received an ovation rivaled only by that given to Honus Wagner or Cy Young.

Harry Hooper.

As Hooper is believed to have managerial ability, aside from his popularity, the Red Sox owners are said to be giving him serious consideration. Harry has signed as baseball coach at Princeton University, but friends say he would prefer the Red Sox job. If Hooper resigns the Princeton post it is likely to be given to Stuffy McInnis, former star first baseman and one-time Pirate.

A STEREOTYPED MANEUVER in football is that of sacrificing a down by stepping out of bounds with the leather when it is put in play close to the sidelines, so that it will be brought in 15 yards for the next play. Many argue that some attempt should be made to advance it (Yale is one team that generally does), even though an attack can be made in only one direction. Others object to it because it uses up time, and entails the danger of fumbling or injury in a meaningless pile-up, and for these reasons a new rule has been suggested giving the team in possession of the ball the privilege of having the oval moved in 15 yards whenever it chooses, losing one down as a penalty.*

BUT ONE TEAM has found a way to have the ball moved in without running chances of injury or fumbling in the pile-up. W. G. Crowell, veteran official, reports it. He relates that in a game he refereed, he placed the ball close to the sideline, stepped across the line, blew his whistle and waited for the pile up. There was none. Instead, while the quarterback was calling signals the center made a half turn and flipped the ball out of bounds

"For the moment I was dazed," Crowell says. "Like everybody else, I was expecting the backs to get set and one of them to step out of bounds with the ball. The first thing I knew the ball was almost tossed in my teeth. After I got over the shock I realized that it was a good play; a clever play. No pile-up; no chance of fumbling. No chance of getting hurt.

WITH THE BRINGING of the Niagara Falls (Ont.) franchise to this city by Roy D. Schooley, and the decision of the Toronto club to remain out of action this season, the trend of hockey from Canada towards the United States is again brought to attention.

Once a sport exclusively Canadian, hockey has become largely American by adoption. For instance, the International League, of which Pittsburgh is now a part, was originally called the Canadian League and was made up wholly of clubs representing cities in the Dominion.

Roy D. Schooley.

IN FIVE YEARS the complexion of the organization has changed to such an extent that the circuit is now almost entirely American. With Pittsburgh and Syracuse entering, five of the seven cities represented are in the United States, the other members on this side of the border being Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo. The only Canadian towns left in the circuit are London and Windsor. Seven years ago even the National League, from which Pittsburgh recently withdrew, was entirely Canadian, but now six of the 10 teams represent American cities.*

A LONG LINE including Tex Richards, George McLaren, Tiny Hewitt, Andy Gustafson, Tom Parkinson and others attests that Pitt has always been fortunate in finding and developing star fullbacks. There is another on the road now, judging from the stuff that Dick Matesic, of the Panther Freshmen, uncovered in the recent game against the Carnegie Tech Plebes.

Matesic was just about the best boy on the field and there were numerous good ones. In addition to proving an exceptional passer, save that his throws were so speedy the receivers were unable to handle many of them, he is a fine kicker, brilliant punter and star on the defense. He weighs 190, is fast, and should be a crack when he comes up to the varsity next year.

NEXT TO MATESIC, the best-looking prospects in the yearling tussle were Skladany, Pitt Frosh captain and end, and Stewart, also captain and playing the same position for the Plaid Plebes. Both are naturals, and show up just as Joe Donchess did when he was a freshman. The most promising linemen are Meredith, Love and Onder for Pitt, and Sklar at center and Heinzer at guard for Carnegie, all big and fast. Meredith is perhaps the best of the lot.

Both schools have unusually good punting material coming along Tesser for Carnegie and Matesic and Hogan for Pitt boot beautifully. Young Hogan, a Meadville boy, kicked one from behind his own goal

CLEVELAND, Oct. 25.—Carnegie Tech's Tartans will mark time against the Western Reserve Redcats at League Park this afternoon as Coaches Steffen and Waddell planned to rest most of their 'varsity men and depend upon their second and third stringers.

Their morale, lowered by a succession of defeats, the Reserve boys suffered another crushing blow late this week when Gordon Locke, their coach, was forced to relinquish charge of the team to Jack Davis, freshman coach.

LOCKE ILL

Locke has been ill for some time, and worry over the continued poor showing of his club sent him to the hospital, where he is in a condition bordening on the critical.

Not a person in Cleveland expects Western Reserve to do more than attempt to hold the score down.

However, the Skibo directors plan to start a team composed of a mixture of first and second stringers. Capt. Dreshar and Don Fletcher will be at their accustomed posts, but the two second string ends will be on the job, as well as the entire Reserve backfield. Red Jones is to play center, and Lew Schnupp will be at right tackle.

GRAVENO MAY PLAY

There was a chance that a switch might be made in the backfield, sending John Graveno, a Cleveland boy, to left halfback in place of Murray Armentrout. Graveno is a local boy, and many friends here want to see him in action again. He was once an All-City scholastic halfback.

With football interest dying out rapidly in the face of Reserves' poor showing this year, not more than 8,000 people were expected to witness the game today.

WEST VICTOR OVER HARRIS

By JAMES MILLER.

Tiger Joe West, of Donora, shook off the sharp and powerful punches of Harry Harris, Bellaire, O., middleweight, to come from behind and defeat the latter in his first main bout appearance in these parts at the Moose Temple, downtown, last night.

It was not until West had tasted Harris' straight right on the whiskers for the first three rounds that he did some hard punching of his own. In these rounds, West appeared satisfied with flickering a left to Harris' midsection, while Harry jabbed and crossed his right repeatedly.

The next round was even, with both fighters landing hard blows, Harris directing his attack at West's rock-like chin, and the Tiger pounding the Bellaire fighter soundly about the body.

REFEREE DECIDES BOUT

The next five rounds went to West, who did all of the leading and harder punching. Several times during the last half of the fight West hurt Harris. In the seventh stanza West crossed a right that landed on Harris' chin, forcing him to hold on. Again in the ninth, the Tiger banged Harry on the chin with another right and had him all but out on his feet.

The last round was won by Harris by a fair margin, but not decisive enough to turn the battle in his favor.

It took the referee's vote to decide the fracas. A new judge, Frank Hogan, from the West End, decided on Harris, while the other judge, Frank Brown, voted West. Harris weighed 165¼ pounds and West 161¾.

Jimmy Kelly, southpaw welterweight of the North Side, scored his second straight knockout at the Moose Temple when he toppled Paul Oger, of Washington, Pa., for the count in the second round of the scheduled six-round semi-final.

Oger was down twice from left hooks for counts of nine in the opening rounds; one landed on his chin and the other found his stomach. Oger tried to claim a foul on the body blow, but could not get away with it. The punch that decided the fight, a left hook to the chin, came after two minutes and 30 seconds of the second round.

M'VEY VICTOR

Sunny Jim McVey, Negro, of Braddock, defeated Frank Monroe, Fair Haven veteran, in the second bout. McVey forced the fight from the start. They are middleweights.

Tom Anderson, Hill Negro, won the referee's decision over Al Farone, of McKees Rocks, in the opening setto. Anderson had which, by the way, has not yet been located, the city was being flooded with spurious ducats. It has been estimated by the police that from 2,000 to 3,000 bogus pasteboards have been sold.

SCAN ALL TICKETS

Those that fell into the hands of the police and into the possession of Pitt's athletic office were found to be only fair copies and fairly easy to distinguish from real ones. W. Don Harrison, athletic director, has arranged for a force of bank clerks to be on hand today at The Stadium to aid in detecting the spurious or

In cases were holders of fake tickets get past the gate-tenders and into The Stadium and seek to take seats belonging to holders of O. K. ducats, the interlopers will be ejected.

Barring a tie, which is not considered likely by those experts who know the strength and weakness of the rival elevens, the victory string of one must snap today, and the bang that will attend the snapping will be heard from the home of the codfish to the habitat of the grape-fruit; from the tall timber of the Northwest to the sunny sands of Florida, where rests the lazy alligator and basks the social registerite.

IRISH FAVORITES

Notre Dame, with the Navy, Southern Methodist and proud Carnegie Tech already trampled underfoot, rules a favorite to wind up on the long end of things today. Pitt's record is impressive enough, possibly is strong as that of the Irish, but Rockne has another great football team, and those willing to lay the long green on the outcome of the struggle are prone to read of Pitt's triumphs over Waynesburg, West Virginia, Western Reserve and Syracuse with their fingers crossed. West Virginia and Syracuse were as tough for Pitt as was Navy and Southern Methodist for Notre Dame, but the decisive triumph of Irish arms over Carnegie's highly touted eleven has served to boost the stock of the South Benders above that of Dr. Sutherland's prides.

The crippled condition of two or three of Pitt's star linemen, however tales of their hurts may be regarded as bearish yarns, also has served to make folks a bit doubtful as to Pitt's chances, and, too, the football world still refuses to forget Pitt's miserable forward pass defense against Southern California in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena last New Year's afternoon.

Unless the field is wet and the going treacherous at game time today, Coach Rockne will start practically the same lineup he used against Carnegie last week. His shock troops will shock only in their conspicuous absence. One or two changes on the line, at a guard and an end, and a possible revamping of the fullback post, may develop.

CONLEY AT END

Rockne plans to send his Irish into the fray with Capt. Tom Conley at right end, paired with Kirth at the right tackle and the dynamic atom, Bert Metzger, or Pierce at right guard. Kerjes was in that position against Carnegie, but suffered an injury that forced Rock to leave him behind in South Bend.

Yarr will be at center, with Kassis at left guard, Culver at the tackle and either Host, who was in there at the gun against Tech, or Kosky, who tallied the first touchdown, at left end.

Frank Carideo, the All-America quarter, another of those supersmart footballers, goes at quarterback. Marchmound Schwartz, the good-looking Dutchman, and Marty Brill will be at the halves and either Moon Mullins or Jumping Joe Savoldi at fullback. Mullins is not in the best of

STELLAR GRID TILTS TODAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—Half a dozen sectors of the Eastern football front today had stellar attractions.

Notre Dame and Pittsburgh, both unbeaten and untied, caused a sell-out for the first time since the Pitt Stadium was built.

The Yale Bowl was the site of a colorful battle between Army's unbeaten cadets and Yale.

A strictly metropolitan duel between New York University and Fordham made the Yankee Stadium a mecca for close to 80,000 fans.

Other features were the clash of Dartmouth's triumphant Indians and Harvard at the Harvard Stadium; the Princeton-Navy joust at Princeton; the Penn State-Colgate clash at State College; an all-Philadelphia duel between Temple and Villanova; the Brown-Holy Cross combat at Providence, and the night game in the Atlantic City Auditorium between Washington and Jefferson and Lafayette.

LAYDENMEN SET DOWN CATHOLIC U., 13-0

BLUFFITES WIN FIFTH GAME IN ROW

Another Good Win

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN.

The Night Riders galloped vigorously at Forbes Field last evening to canter off with a 13-0 Duke triumph over Dutch Bergman's air-minded Catholic University of America host in a grid exhibition that deserved a far larger gallery than the throng of 7,000 that braved bracing weather to behold one of the fastest and most thrilling tussles of the local campaign. 'Twas the fifth consecutive triumph for Elmer Layden's Red and Blue array and the third victory in a row over squads employing the same Notre Dame system of contesting employed by the Hilltoppers.

Forward passes—their own and the enemy's—brought success to the Bluff cause, though not until the latter moments of play was that success by any means assured. The Pittsburghers topped off a short hostile punt by zooming over for a touchdown on an abbreviated pass, Bud Devinney to Ben Pawlina, about the middle of the second period, after which it was not until the fracas was just about finished that the second tally arrived, the diminutive Devinney contributing this welcome effort in spectacular fashion by spearing a C. U. heave on the Washington 46 mark, whence he flashed down the side and over the final stripe to stow the tussle in the bag.

KOVALCHEK HURT

The win was quite a costly one for the Hillmen, for in the course of the fray, Kass Kovalchek, scintillant fullback, splintered a small bone in his right foot and, according to report current after the tilt, will be lost to the Laydenites for the remainder of the season. With the University of North Dakota and Geneva games looming immediately ahead, the injury to Kovalcheck may prove a serious blow to Bluffite fortunes, for the rangy California, Pa., youth is not only a battering-ram on the attack, but also a splendid performer on the defense.

Catholic U., with a fine backfield trio in Oliver, DeMello and Neary, threatened early to steal the show from the home combine. A 30-yard jaunt around left end by DeMello, with a 19-yard pass from Oliver to the same young man following promptly, slipped C. U. a first down on the Duke 21 ere the joust was well under way. Three line thrusts added 11 yards for first down on the Duquesne 10 and if the Steel City contingent hadn't braced courageously at this juncture, things might have been vastly different.

As it was, Pat Lally, ubiquitous Bluff pivot ace, intercepted an Oliver toss over midline on third down and brought the apple out from the home fifth strip to the 10. 'Twas in this scrimmage that Kovalcheck was handed his quietus, Pawlina replacing him and offering excellent account of himself thereafter.

Smoke Abele, husky Hill wingman, punted to Blasi, invading quarterback, on the C. U. 10-yard line to set the stage in frame two for the first Duke score. Blasi progressed to his own 13, where he was spilled. Oliver sacrificed two yards to step out of bounds on the right on the next face-off, whereupon DeMello lifted a sorry boot that soared out on the Catholic U. 21 mark. Benedict clipped right tackle for two and a double pass, Benedict to Pawlina, netted three at the opposite side. Doggo Burns, fleet Hilltop right half, caromed between left end and tackle for nine and first down on the C. U. seven.

A PASS SCORES

Off-tackle thumps by Benedict and Burns totaled three yards. Benedict picked up another in the line. Then, on fourth down with two yards still required, Devinney coolly took the pellet, slid backward a pace or two, and flipped the oval over right flank and into the end zone, where Pawlina was waiting for it and with never a rival near him. A neat bit of strategy, with the visiting backs drawn in close to resist the logical line plunge, Devinney's placement for the extra point was blocked.

Oliver, a calm, deadly passer, hurled quite a few highly menacing heaves throughout the remainder of stanza two and all of session three.

Had Oliver been able to keep at the task of throwing 'em, it is possible that Duquesne would not have counted again—and it is not at all beyond concept of imagination that C. U. would have broken into the registration herself. But Oliver, limping noticeably, was at length withdrawn in favor of Whalen, a good tosser, but less accurate than his predecessor.

DEVINNEY TALLIES

The final marker happened thus: A 15-yard penalty for holding forced the Dukes to relinquish the ball and kick with perhaps three minutes left to travel. Whalen gathered in the spheroid on his own 26 and moved on four yards to the 30, where he was dragged to earth. The ensuing play was a pass and it bumped the Washingtonians from the breadline. High over left end the pellet sailed. Blasi was scheduled to receive it, but the speeding Devinney zipped there first. Off he was and away. Interference formed and cleared from his path such opposition as C. U. could muster. Bud did the rest, save that Pawlina attended to the extra point, Devinney planting the ball for the placement.

Came then a Duke kick-off, more Capital passes, and in a trice Devinney had hung up a repeat interception act to romp over from the 34 mark. This time, however, a Duquesne man was offside and the stunt was nullified as the Red and Blue absorbed a penalty. An instant later came the ultimate whistle.

The Duke running attack was nothing to crow over. Turned in almost invariably at the ends, the Hill speedsters garnered only three first downs—and one of these was rendered possible by a penalty. McCarthy and Abele booted well, with Lally meriting praise for alertness at center. But the Layden crew, with Devinney in the van, displayed the grit that is traditional with Bluffite hosts and snatched advantage of the opportunities arising to ring up another impressive gridiron achievement.

BIG SIX FIRES KANSAS U.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 25. —(AP.)—The University of Kansas virtually was eliminated from the Big Six Conference in an announcement here early today that other member schools would schedule no more athletic contests with the Lawrence Institution because of Kansas' violation of "the rule of this conference relating to recruiting and subsidation of athletes."

After a long executive session, faculty representatives of the Big Six Conference schools issued this statement shortly before 11 a. m. today:

"In view of practices at the University of Kansas in violation of the rule of this conference relating to recruiting and subsidizing athletes, the other five members of this conference decline to schedule any athletic games or contests, not now under contract, with the University of Kansas for this academic year, and no games or contests beyond this year."

Two League Grid Games Tomorrow

Two big games will be flashed in the Western Pennsylvania Independent Gridiron Conference tomorrow afternoon. At the Bridgeville Speedway, the Majestics and McKeesport Olympics will clash in the feature game of the league race.

At the Quarry Stadium, East Pittsburgh and West View will flash their stuff and the outcome of both games means much to all clubs in the championship race.

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 42.

The third notable player to join me in 1925 was James Emory Foxx, now one of the batting aces of the world champions, but he did not cost more than a moderate-priced automobile. You sometimes read of a man stumbling into an old picture shop and picking up a dusty painting for a few dollars that later is found to be the work of an old master and then the bidding starts around the $100,000 mark.

Connie Mack

Once in a while we managers have this luck. We pass over a few dollars and in return get a gem.

One hot day in August, 1924, an old friend of mine turned up at Shibe Park for a chat just before the game.

You all will remember J. Franklin Baker, who was my heavy hitting third baseman from 1909 to the end of the season of 1914.

He was called Home Run Baker because he was good for 14 to 20 round-trippers during a season. That was a lot of homers in those days, but in these times of the constant sock out of the park they wouldn't look so many.

Baker was an outstanding distance hitter and occupied the clean-up position in the batting order during a stretch when the Athletics won four pennants in five straight years.

A VISIT FROM BAKER

As I write this down, I can look back and see those life-saving home runs he hit off Rube Marquard and Christy Mathewson in the second and third games of the World Series in 1911.

So I greeted my old slugger cordially. Frank long since had been retired from baseball. He had saved the money he had earned on the diamond and put it in a big farm on the eastern shore of Maryland, a section famed for its rich loam.

In recent years, a new baseball circuit had been formed in this district called the Eastern Shore League. Baker, although he never wanted to be connected with baseball again, was coaxed to manage the Easton (Md.) team.

The only reason he finally accepted was that Easton was not far from his home and the league was so small that it made no great demands on his time.

So it was the manager of the Easton team who was sitting in front of my desk in my office. We exchanged the usual pleasantries, talked about old times, and then Baker began to state the object of his visit.

SELLS JIMMY FOXX

"Mr. Mack, my team is not playing today and I came up here for a special reason besides wanting to see a big league game again."

"I have a fellow on my team who is a wonder. His name is Jimmy Foxx and he can both catch and play third base and do either job well. But that's only half of it. That boy sure can pole the ball. There isn't a left field wall in the circuit where he hasn't hit the ball over."

"I'll stake my word that he will make good in the major leagues. Why, he isn't 16 years old yet, he won't be 16 till next October and—

"Hold on," I broke in, "Frank, I don't see how he is going to interest me, I like players young, all right, but I am not exactly robbing cradles or inviting boy scouts on my team. You say he is 15—"

"But you haven't heard all," Baker interrupted, "he's not yet 16, but he is as big as I am, I am not trying to wish a frail schoolboy on you. Wait until you see him."

A CHEAP PICKUP

Baker went on telling me about his wonder and I had a hunch. You must know that Baker is the soul of integrity; he's as honest as the day is long. He is a man of few words and not given to overstatement. I became much impressed with his story.

Finally I stopped him again.

"How much does your club want for this boy?"

"Two thousand dollars."

"Sold," was my reply, and for the first time in my life I had bought a player never seen either by myself or one of my trusted scouts.

I never glimpsed Foxx until he jumped on our train at Baltimore when we were on the way to the training camp that next spring. But I saw that Baker had not misled me.

A stout, red-cheeked and round-faced country boy came to me in my drawing room on the car and timidly introduced himself. He was Jimmy Foxx, who had celebrated his sixteenth birthday the October before.

JIMMY FARMED OUT

Foxx wasn't in the training camp a week before I saw that I had a youth who ought to develop into a valuable player. I have had a lot of young players on my team, but I never grabbed one as young as Foxx, and as I saw him drive the ball through the palmettoes in back of left field at Fort Myers, I felt convinced he would do the same thing some day in the majors.

It seemed to me that it would not do to keep a player of his tender years on the bench. So at the end of the training trip I loaned him to the Jersey City club, of the International League. He played there for the greater part of the year and rejoined us in September.

His subsequent advance is known to followers of baseball.

I don't think any right-handed hitter ever lived who can drive a ball as far as Foxx. Any time he meets the ball it carries. Often he will hit a liner over the infield that apparently will be caught by the left fielder or center fielder, and, to the surprise of everybody, the ball lands in the bleachers for a home run.

Foxx's carry fools everybody. In 1930 some of the hitters made more home runs than Jimmy, but I don't believe any of them can boast as large a proportion of extraordinary home runs.

He has hit seven or eight home runs at Philadelphia over the left field stands, roof and all. In Chicago, he was the first and only hitter to drive the ball over the left field stands, roof and all. He has made the longest home run ever hit to left field at the Yankee Stadium and holds the record for making the longest four-master ever hit to the center field bleachers in Cleveland. And Jimmy is still very young, with more future ahead of him than experience in back of him.

I always rated J. Franklin Baker as a player who did big things for me, but I think his master stroke came when he no longer wore a Athletican uniform.

NOTRE DAME'S GALLOPING GAEL

Ho! Hoist high the drawbridge, flood deep the great moat;
Clamp tight each stout portal,
man wall and swarm tower;
Pierce air of October with clarion note
Of the rallying call! Summon last ounce of power,
For nearer, yet nearer — stern heart may well quail!—
Sweeps the thundering host of the Galloping Gael.

All nations comprise that colossal command,
Yet all ride arrayed in the trapping and fixture
Of common intention: To conquer the land—
This legion of heterogeneous mixture;
The planet-at-large is the limitless pale,
Whence is gathered the clan of the Galloping Gael.

Past count the fleet minions that skim the chill turf,
Inspired inspiration of legend and lyric;
With din to drown rage of the winter-wild surf,
The clang of the clash is the Celt's panegyric;
Aye, deeds tell the story where words can but fail
To describe the assault of the Galloping Gael.

Unmatched in the science of ruthless attack,
Advancing with dash, but with flawless precision,
No tool known to combat these warriors lack;
For aught they require they boast ample provision:
No! "Caught unprepared" shall be never the wail
Of the far-seeing chief of the Galloping Gael.

Full many a fortress serene in its strength
Has beheld its proud battlements stormed, topped and taken;
Full many a stronghold throughout the brave length
Of the land has been sacked and to pillage forsaken,
For woe to the foeman contesting
the trail
To the crown that's the goal of the Galloping Gael.

Hence! Hasten to post—brook
nor halt nor delay;
King Football's thrice-dauntless young Lords of Creation
Surge grimly toward titular contest today,
As roar from their ranks rings with battle's elation;—
Ah! Who shall dare deed of Herculean scale?
O! Who shall smite charge of the Galloping Gael?

GENEVA NOSES OUT GROVE CITY, 13-12

BEAVER FALLS, Oct. 25. — Howard Harpster and his Geneva College football team did something here last night that Genevans always regard as the essential thing for a successful football season. They defeated Grove City, 13-12.

The Covenanters opened up good holes in the Crimson line and gave Art Grahame plenty of chance to take to the air. And once in the air the Genevans passed Grove City out of the picture.

Grove City scored one touchdown on straight football and got another on intercepted lateral pass. Geneva scored their two touchdowns by using the air to get into scoring position and then the line opened up holes to allow the backs to score. The extra point that won the game was one of the real plays of the battle, a forward pass from Grahame to Ewing. Ewing caught the pass with two Grove City defensive men on his back. The lineup:

Grove City—12.		Geneva—13.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25.—(INS.)—West Virginia University turned the tables on Georgetown here last night at Griffith Stadium and surprised 10,000 spectators by defeating the Jesuits, 14 to 7.

ROCKNE GOES ON AIR

KNUTE NAMES WINNERS OF CONTEST

In an interesting address over Station WJAS last night, Knute Rockne, head coach of football and athletic director at Notre Dame University, who's football team meets Pitt in the Pitt Stadium here this afternoon, announced the winners of the question contest sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

In this contest, readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph were urged to mail questions concerning football to Coach Rockne. The Irish coach selected from the thousands of questions turned in 10 which he thought most representative. The 10 readers, whose questions were answered by Rockne, were awarded two tickets to the Pitt-Carnegie Tech game in the Stadium, November 8.

Following is a complete list of winners:

Mildred Schell, 868 East Ohio street, North Side.
V. A. Lamark, Coraopolis, Pa.
Joe Voelker, 118 North Winebiddle avenue.
Nora Gainey, 4216 Ludlo street.
Mary Regina Joyce, 714 Westmoreland avenue, Jeannette.
Edward Everett, 901 Bennett street, McKeesport.
George Smith, 425 South Ninth street, Connellsville.
Mrs. D. R. Singer, 330 Highland lane, Edgeworth.
Raymond R. Ley, 2218 Wilson avenue.
R. L. Haynes, 165 North Dithridge street.

RECEIVE DUCATS

Miss Schell, Lamark and Voekler were on hand to receive their tickets from Coach Rockne following his period on the air. Rockne was interviewed by Christy Walsh, his syndicate manager, who asked him the 10 questions selected as being the best.

Coach Rockne spent a busy day. He and his Notre Dame squad arrived in Pittsburgh yesterday morning at 7:30. He led them to St. Paul's Cathedral, where they attended mass. The squad repaired to the P. A. A., where Irish headquarters had been established, for breakfast.

Following a morning spent about Oakland and vicinity, during which Coach Rockne paid visits to a few friends and former players, the famous coach attended a luncheon of the Chamber of Commerce, at which he was the principal speaker.

BUSY DAY

At 2 o'clock the Notre Dame squad dashed on the Stadium turf, where Rockne put his men through a brisk drill. Then he saw that they were all settled at dinner, sent them to a movie and hopped over to a Pitt Alumni smoker, where he made another talk.

From there he rushed to the studio of WJAS, where he went on the air and broadcast the winners of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph contest.

And all he has to do today is to direct his team as it battles Pitt.

Not a bad day, even for the great Rock.

Winners in the Sun-Telegraph Rockne contest who were not present at WJAS's studio last night will have their tickets mailed to them the first of next week.

KNUTE ROCKNE — MISS SCHELL

Miss Mildred Schell, of 868 East Ohio street, North Side, was one of the 10 readers of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph who had the question she sent to Knute Rockne, Notre Dame University football coach, answered over the radio through station WJAS last night. Miss Schell is pictured above receiving her two tickets for the Pitt-Tech game from Coach Rockne.

Sport Vignettes

Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself hath said, "Naught but the lack of a ducat can keep me from that Pitt-Notre Dame battle today" . . . There may be other grid games the length and breadth of the land today, but who cares? . . . Times certainly are getting tough in the fight game . . . Even the Moose Temple tickets are smaller, beginning with last night's show . . . Few local boxers have had the phenomenal rise of George Panka, Homestead heavyweight, who figures to knock down a couple thousand kopecs for his shindy with Emmett Rocco at Motor Square Garden next Monday night . . . Only 13 months ago, he made his debut at the Meyers Bowl, in North Braddock, and received $50 for knocking out Ken Harley in a few seconds . . . For his next start there he drew $75 for knocking out Harry Miller in one round . . . When he next appeared in the Bowl, about a month ago, his pay was more than $1,500 for a great fight with Tom Heeney . . . Last winter he was boxing for a few hundred dollars in the Garden and now he's in the big money class there.

The Pitt-Ohio State game at Columbus, O., November 15, has been designated the Dad's Day contest . . . This is the annual occasion set aside for fathers of Buckeye students to attend a football game . . . Fathers of the football players are given seats on the sidelines and are introduced to the spectators between the halves . . . Sergt. Sammy Baker's brother, Eddie, boxes Red Barry in the main bout of a show at Cumberland, Md., next Thursday night.

Phil Goldstein, local lightweight boxer, is opening a new indoor miniature 18-hole golf course at 1415-17 Fifth avenue today . . . Benny McArthur, the lightweight boxer, formerly of Saginaw, Mich., who now is making his home in McKeesport, boxing under the management of Bernard Kelly, Jr., is a former sparring partner of Sammy Mandell, erstwhile lightweight champion, and made a hit in beating Young Joe Walcott in his local debut recently . . . He meets Johnny Smackey, of Canonsburg, in his next start, in a main bout at Johnstown, November 3 . . . Benny is 24 years old and a quiet, soft-spoken youth of more than average intelligence and with a likeable personality . . . He has beaten Roger Bernard, Benny Duke, Jackie Nichols, Tommy Meekin, Pee Wee Jerrell, Terry Lingo, Ray Van Hook and Russell Bradford, among others, and recently returned to action again following a long layoff due to a torn Achilles tendon in one of his heels, the same sort of an injury that put Tiger Joe Randall on the shelf.

Coach Chick Meehan, of the New York University Violets, who play Carnegie Tech at the Stadium Saturday of next week, has a staff of eight assistants, including Luby DiMeolo, captain of last year's University of Pittsburgh eleven . . . Two Coraopolis boys, the LaMark brothers, Herman and Joe, are backs on the Violet squad, and Ernie Vavra, former Turtle Creek High School star, who also is a baseball pitcher of parts, is one of the tackles . . . The coming of N. Y. U. will revive memories of that Ken Strong-dominated tussle at Forbes Field in 1929, in which the late Al Lassman received those head injuries from which he never recovered, and in which Tech was beaten, 27-7, to spoil a perfect season . . . Last year, Carnegie returned the compliment, winning, 20-0, in New York.

Are you ready, Pitt? Are you ready, Notre Dame? All right, let's go! And may the better team win!—HARRY KECK.

SOUTH HILLS TOPS PERRY

South Hills High blanked Perry High School's grid machine, 20 to 0, in the feature City League battle yesterday. Oliver was whitewashed by Schenley, 13 to 0, Peabody whipped Fifth Avenue 30-0, and South trimmed Allderdice, 20-0, in other league contests.

Other important scholastic grid warfare yesterday brought the favorites, as a rule, through to victories.

McKees Rocks tripped Carnegie, 27-0, Duquesne beat Swissvcale, 7-0, Homestead lost to Scott, 15-0, East Pittsburgh bumped Rankin, 7-0, Etna downed Stowe, 7-0, and Ambridge blanked Sewickley, 19-0.

Charleroi and Donora battled to a scoreless tie; Steubenville topped Dayton, 6-0; Mt. Lebanon won from Arnold Prep, 7-0; Avalon bowed to Dormont, 19-0; Scottdale lost to Dunbar Township, 13-6, and McDonald and Coraopolis played a 0-0 deadlock.

Canonsburg beat out Bridgeville, 25-13; Norwin won from Youngwood, 13-0; Brownsville tripped Bellevernon, 13-2; Duke Prep lost to Mt. Lebanon Juniors, 7-0; Bellevue defeated Central Catholic, 20-13, and Munhall toppled Braddock, 20-0.

line Saturday out of bounds at the Carnegie 35 with only one bound. He runs well, too. Pitt's other backs showed little. One of them, Galini, is being remodeled by Coach Skip Gougler into a center. His passing is none too good at present, but Gougler thinks he will come through. No team tackles better than Pitt, and in Skladany, Hogan, Meredith, Onder, Matesic and Simms the Panthers have lads coming on who know just how to tackle right now.

Mrs. Payne Whitney.

A REFUSAL TO give Twenty Grand for 125 grand doesn't mean that somebody became mixed up or confused on money values. It means that the owner of a race horse named Twenty Grand declined an offer of $125,000 for him. Mrs. Payne Whitney is the owner and the purchase offer was made by Thomas W. Murphy, the trainer who developed the young thoroughbred. Mrs. Whitney, in refusing to sell, said she had spent many years in trying to gain possession of a colt of the caliber of Twenty Grand and that no amount of money could induce her to part with him. She is hopeful that as a 3-year-old he will be the Gallant Fox of 1931. Only Harry Payne Whitney's Equipoise and George D. Widener's Jamestown stood between Twenty Grand and the juvenile championship this year, and during the present month Twenty Grand came back in such impressive style as to defeat Equipoise twice in important stakes, the Junion Champion event at Aqueduct and the Kentucky Jockey Club race at Louisville.

PANTHERS SET FOR IRISH

physical trim, but may be used during the first moments of the battle.

A tentative shock-troop array will consist of Vik and O'Brien at the ends; McNamara and McMannon at the tackles; Terlack and Greene at the guards and Rogers at center, with Jackwich, Koken, Luktaz and Howard in the backfield.

The condition of the bruised and battered members of the squad about 1:30 this afternoon will have a lot to do with the makeup of the Pitt eleven.

At the ends, it is likely that Ted Daily, the sophomore youngster, who played such a bang-up game against Syracuse, and Eddie Hirschberg will get the call. Chuck Tully, the towering veteran, and Jess Quatsie, powerful son of Italy, will go at the tackles, with Mike Milligen and Ernie Lewis at the guards. Hart Morris, who has been playing left guard regularly, is almost certain to ride the bench nursing his hurts, and does not figure to be called on unless the need is absolute.

DAUGHERTY PIVOTS

Ralph Daugherty, out to grab himself a place in the race for All-America center honors, will be over the ball and, it is hoped by Pitt's loyal sons, over the Notre Dame attack.

Capt. Eddie Baker of course will duel with Carideo at quarterback. Josh Williams, the southpaw veteran, and Warren Heller, sophomore star, are slated to hold down halfback jobs. Franklyn Hood, he of the mighty arm, who has been plunging the line in fine style, or Jimmy Clark, speedy little fellow, will be ready for the fullback call. I think they'll start Clark, for with Eddie Baker backing up the line, they'll need his speed back at the safety position.

Big Jim MacMurdo, hoping that his injured knee will hold up, will be ready for instant duty at his right end position, and Rip Collins, another strong wing, will be available for either a starting or early reserve job at one of the terminals.

Heavy going, on a treacherous and slippery field, will be highly undesirable to both elevens. Neither will profit much if the turf is wet and soggy, and a wet ball will not be very conducive to the success of Notre Dame's aerial game. It won't help Pitt's passing much, either, but the Panthers are not supposed to have an aerial game as formidable as that of the Irish.

WHISTLE AT 2

The game will get underway promptly at 2. The Stadium will be thrown open at noon, and it is the earnest desire of the Pitt officials and the police that the spectators get to their seats as early as possible. The jam is going to be terriffc at best, and fans will only be giving themselves a break if they come to the Stadium early.

The Police Department will have every available man on duty in and around the Stadium to keep traffic moving.

The game will be officiated by John Egan, of Duquesne, in capacity of referee; George Young, Illinois Wesleyan, as umpire; E. W. Burch, of Earlham, as field judge and Cal Bolster, of Pittsburgh, as linesman.

PANKA TO TRY FOR KNOCKOUT

Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, and George Panka, of Homestead, heavyweight rivals, who clash in the 10-round main bout at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, will wind up their training today and rest tomorrow. Each is on a fine edge, according to reports from their training quarters.

Panka, through his manager, Bunny Buntach, said today he expects to win by a knockout. He saw Rocco defeat Tom Heeney at the Garden recently and believes he knows enough about the Italian's style to polish him off.

Bengough, Hargrave Released by Yanks

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—(AP.)—The New York Yankees have released two catchers. Ben Bengough, veteran receiver, who has been troubled with a sore arm, was sent to the Milwaukee club of the American Association. Bubbles Hargrave, who came here from St. Paul last spring, was released unconditionally.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—The attention-callers of the gridiron are keeping a closer watch this season on the ball, and those who go down to the arena in armchairs are, as a result, staying closer to their seats.

Louis Reid.

The networks, at present, have fallen into the curious practice of announcing statistics to the sacrifice of those qualities of color and human interest. More than 10 minutes were devoted last Saturday to revealing the yardage gained by Army and Harvard in rushing, in forward-passing, in lateral-passing, in punting, the number of first downs, of passes completed and incompleted, and so on.

Who cares? Such deadly statistics can be found in the papers the next morning for those who want them. But the papers cannot impart as successfully the spectacle that has taken place.

Football Brings Glamour to Armchairs

The greatest show in America is a major football game. Nothing, on or off the air, rivals it in excitement, in glamour, in the do-or-die spirit of the contestants. The broadcasters, until television comes to their aid, should give more of their adjectives to the bands, the cheers, the human note of the games—always a stirring note to the ears.

Nor does it seem to me necessary for announcers, as is recently the case with the M. Husing, to reveal the home town of the players at the height of action. "John M. Whosis, the left halfback from Watertown, Mass., has the ball. He's running 10 . . 15 . . 20 yards. . He's tackled on the 40-yard line by George W. Whatshis name, a boy from Saline, Kan."

The Harvard-Army game was the best of the football broadcasts here last Saturday, chiefly because of the closeness of the score and the suspense and thrills that were continually in the air. The game was strangely the feature of rival networks.

Wonder why the broadcasters cannot get together at a conference table and decide upon a schedule which will not conflict with each other's programs. Chief interest last Saturday was in the Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech game. The parlors were keen to know if Rockne's pregame fears and tears were genuine or just a fine Freudian frenzy to take advantage of the force of psychology. But not a word came out of the air from South Bend.

If the airings of spectacular news events can be put on the air in a few hours' notice, it seems to me that those of football games might be arranged in a few days' notice, the radio men concentrating, co-operatively if they can, on those contests which promise to be the outstanding ones of the current week.

* * *

The N. B. C. is experimenting in the pepping-up of its football broadcasts from New Haven. It is welcome news. It is assigning Ray Perkins, radio wisecracker, as chief aid to McNamee in those moments when there is a lull in the drama on the field. I hope he is rushed to the microphone when the broadcasters feel an attack of statistics coming on.

Jazz Maestro Begins Musical Pathfinding

The majority of the jazz masters are not by any stretch of a press agent's imagination to be called musical pathfinders. They stick closely to the workshops of the Broadway balladeers, believing that the feet-tappers never tire of the familiar chants and tempos of Tin Pan Alley.

Harry Yerkes, latest to take up a Columbia baton, is striking out in more uncultivated waters in the jazz sea. Recently he unearthed "Jazz America," a symphony in modern rhythm by Albert Chiafferelli, which has not been played since its first public performance in Aeolian Hall in 1925. Not content with such research, he also resurrected the old tune which made Gallagher and Shean the bywords of a nation and presented it as Lizst, Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Sousa might have written it.

It is a fruity field of musical burlesque — this adaptation of popular songs to the styles of the masters, and one scarcely explored by those who are forever sounding invitations to the dance. I look for a rush of the jazz maestros to the technique of Tschaikowsky.

For that matter, the lofty leaders of the symphony bands might similarly build a captivating musical fabric out of the old hoedowns of the countryside. Can't we have, Stokowski, "Turkey in the Straw" and "Arkansas Traveler" as Beethoven or Brahms or Rimsky-Korsakoff might have written them?

Though John Philip Sousa is the best march-composing brain the world has ever known, his name is never mentioned when lists of the greatest living Americans are compiled.

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

That immense auditorium at Atlantic City is to be the scene of a football game tonight when Washington and Jefferson meet Lafayette. WJAS through the Columbia System is to carry a play-by-play description starting at 9 o'clock. Harry Vonzell will make his debut as a football announcer. Ted Husing had intended to fly to the seashore after the Pitt-Notre Dame description here this afternoon but gave up the stunt when informed of weather conditions. With much regret we see the passing of Miniature Theater, KDKA at 10:30, for the time being at least. "Nocturne" is to be their finale. The feature is to be replaced with the Chicago Opera series next Saturday.

Claude Morris' "Homey Period" on KDKA at 6:15 is a favorite with us.

WCAE has Ray Perkins at 8:30 in the Shell program.

Almost as comforting as letters from home will be the Braddock Male Chorus concert for Far North listeners on KDKA at 11:15.

KQV has good features in Saturday Knights at 7:30 with "Salt and Peanuts" and a DX feature at 12:30 a. m.

QUESTION A DAY:

Please tell me where I may hear these features: Davey Hour, Moonshine and Honeysuckle and The Cuckoo?—M. S., Darlington Road.

Answer—Davey Hour returns to WCAE tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock featuring several Herbert favorites. Moonshine and Honeysuckle also is a WCAE feature tomorrow at 2 o'clock. The Cuckoo starts a new series over WJZ next Tuesday night at 10:30. The program will not come through KDKA due to a previously scheduled feature—the Grogan Organ recital.

Amos 'n' Andy had some nice takeoffs in their sketch for RKO last night.

Andy said with much gusto:

"When we landed in Hollywood, the first thing we received was a big book with about 8,000,000 lines to learn.

"Of course, I wasn't rebarassed at that, but I did feel scared for poor Amos. He can't learn nuthin'."

Again:

"They wanted to get us away from the crowds, they did, so they moved to a new location out of town. But when those movie men were all set up it was a crowd anyway with 76 people chasing around giving directions."

Recounting their experiences with picture stars, they amused us most when they told of meeting "Baby Daniels" at the dressing room door.

We imagine that Correll and Gosden had a grand old time on the movie lots. They're two fine boys, you can "Check and Double Check" on that.

Two new microphones at WCAE cost $450 each, weigh 75 pounds and have shock absorbers in their base to protect the sensitive tubes, condensers.

They may be adjusted to any height and come in handy particularly on Cousin Lora's program. The mike can be lowered to a child's height, so that it is no longer necessary for these juvenile entertainers to stand on a chair.

By mistake, the station received a crate of hot plates with the new microphone equipment.

"Take them away; we don't want any frying noises," wisecracked the agile Mr. McGee.

Ford Miller says he's glad that water-cooled transmitting tube burned out yesterday after 4,600 hours' service, because he's going to sing "Old Man River" today.

Undoubtedly, Harvey Hays is the network's best "mystery man." Hear him last night in the "Crime Prevention" sketch?

Acting the great detective, Mr. Hays waved a diamond thief to jail, then, pointing to an erring attorney who had connived in the theft, he concluded, "A lawyer should always be near his client, so take him to jail, too."

TODAY'S TID BIT:

They call the Velveteer hookup on Friday night the Emerald Network. It takes in Stations WTAM, WCAE, WJAS and WJR.

Statistics on Social Work Here Favored

Members of the Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies met at Salvation Army headquarters yesterday and adopted a resolution aiming to make this city part of the national registration area for social statistics. The plans calls for monthly reports to the United States children's bureau on the amount and cost of social work in the city.

Dr. G. A. Lundberg, director of the Bureau of Social Research of the Federation addressed the meeting. M. W. Acheson, Jr., presided.

'Greater Pittsburgh' Attachment Granted

The W. J. Gilmore Drug Company filed a libel in Federal Court against the steamboat "Greater Pittsburgh" for $758.30 for merchandise purchased. Judge Nelson McVicar directed a writ of attachment be served against the boat by the United States marshal.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should try Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 20 years of study.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days, you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and help overcome constipation. Take nightly and note the pleasing results. Millions of boxes sold yearly. 15c, 30c, 60c.

LUCKY GIRL

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER LIV.

While the night lights still burned in the corridors, and the hush of the night still hung over the jail, a strange matron came to bid Cathie get up.

"Put on your clothes quickly, and get into the visitors' room. Mrs. Farnsworth. Your attorney and Mr Moore and some others are waiting."

"Did—did something happen?"

"Now don't ask me. Just get dressed."

So Cathie dressed, with fingers that were all thumbs. She was shaking with nervousness, and a half crazy certainty that the Chinaman's veiled predictions had all come true overnight, and Gordon had come to take her away.

When she saw him, pale as death, his dark hair all tumbled, her chin began to tremble. "Oh Gordon — tell me — tell me—"

"We've got the murderer. The Spinney woman!" Mr. Allan shouted, pounding the table in his excitement.

"Signed confession!" somebody else shouted.

"It was Marguerite. Think of it, Marguerite, all the time!" Gordon cried.

Cathie sat down suddenly. Her knees. They were doubling up, the way they did in the courtroom.

The men went on talking. Gloating over it. Marguerite Spinney . . . a good night's work . . . lucky break for Mrs. Farnsworth . . . clears her all right!

It was what I looked for from the first," Inspector Bidwell was saying.

Policemen Argue

"What YOU looked for . . . You!" Inspector Horgan had to laugh. "Ha, ha—what you said! That's good. You. You was saying, the last I remember, when I said that was MY theory, that the idea was lousy!"

"Have it your own way. You will anyhow," said Inspector Bidwell, with dignity.

"Listen to the flatfeet stepping on each other's bunions," Jesse Allan chuckled, so far forgetting as to slap Cathie on the back. "Neither one of them ever had an idea. It was my theory — worked out with the aid of my good friend Moore—"

"And our good friend, Cheong," Gordon put in rather curtly.

Cathie whispered, "Marguerite. . . . You say it was Marguerite . . . confessed, to killing Mr. Farnsworth!"

"Yes, Marguerite Spinney, Cathie. I'll admit it's kind of a shock . . . want a drink of water, honey? . . . Cathie, don't—please don't—look that way! Why, you should be happy. It clears you, darling. It makes you a free woman."

Cathie tried to speak, gave up.

"Don't take it so hard," Gordon begged. "When you understand why, it will make so many things clear. . . Don't cry, Cathie, it's all over. You can't bring him back. . . you can't undo the past. . . oh, Cathie, dear—don't don't—don't feel so bad!"

Marguerite Dead

"That's not it," she said in a small, strangled voice. "I'm just being selfish, that's all. I'm crying because I thought it was all over, and it's not—"

"Why, the new trial will be nothing. They may not even have it. With you cleared, and the Spinney woman dead—"

"Dead . . . Marguerite, dead . . . too? Oh, Mr. Allan—it's just—too much—"

"No—listen! Listen to me, Mrs. Farnsworth. My God, if you all keep on talking, how can I tell her? The girl doesn't even know what's happened yet. Listen. This Spinney woman confessed, see? And then she committed suicide. See? We found her— traced her over to a rooming house—"

"Let me tell her. Darling, it was Marguerite. She shot Mr. Farnsworth. That was why she escaped—afraid of the cross-questioning. She hid in this rooming house, and waited to see how it came out. If they had acquitted you she'd never have confessed. But rather than see you—"

"That's it. Rather than have me sentenced she took it on herself. No—no, don't stop me, Gordon. I know. It couldn't have been Marguerite. She wouldn't have let me go through all this if she did it herself. No—it couldn't be—"

"But she confessed!" Mr. Allan cried, waving the paper in his fat hand. "She confessed!"

"Suppose she did!" Cathie cried, "what does that prove? Oh, it's no good, I tell you. Just throw your paper away—you're only wasting time. The real murderer is still loose, and Marguerite's dead, and I'm in jail—"

"Cathie, when you hear the confession, dear, you'll see—"

"If you didn't fly off the handle, madam, you'd be better off!" Inspector Bidwell was disgusted and didn't care who knew it.

"Listen to me!" Mr. Allan put up his hand. He began to read in a clear, ringing voice:

"To Whom it may concern:

"I, Marguerite Spinney, confess that I, and I alone, killed Alfred Farnsworth, on the 19th of April, a little after 12 o'clock, in his house, 2670 Presidio avenue. I have no accomplices, nobody knew it but me.

Says He Was Cruel

"First I thought I would kill Chester. God knows he is not fit to live. Then I thought I would take the old one first, and him next. But now I know I can't do it again, so I hope he gets what is coming to him. I wish I had of begun with Chester, but now it is too late.

"I killed Alfred Farnsworth because he deserved it anyway, all the Farnsworth men are rotten, and because if I didn't he would have listened to his lying son and turned Catherine Farnsworth out. She was not the kind to cope with the Farnsworth men.

"Alfred Farnsworth was cruel to my mother, like his father was before him, and cruel to me, and he was starting to be cruel to Catherine, his second wife. He ruined my life and he was starting to ruin hers. So I nipped it. I took his gun and shot him when he was asleep. It never hurt him. He did not wake up.

"I am only telling this now because I have to now to save Mrs. Farnsworth. The crazy jury have found her guilty and she won't get off until somebody confesses, so I confess. I should have done it long ago, I guess, but how could I know anybody would think she did it? I tried to stop her from looking guilty, by hiding the nightgown and all, but it looks like it was a mistake. Everything I ever did in my life turned out a mistake.

Calls Chester Weakling

"So I am ending my life, which should have ended before now. I have nothing to live for, anyhow. I lost everybody I ever loved. My mother went first, then the first Mrs. Farnsworth was taken, then Chester went back on me. That was his father's doings. He poisoned his mind against me. He would have married me otherwise. After that I lost my baby, but I never told Chester that. He thought little Chester was still living, and paid me all I asked until lately. That was one thing I put over on him. The money never got wasted. I sent it all to a sanitarium for tubercular children. It was the only Farnsworth money ever went for charity, I guess.

"I hope Mrs. Farnsworth excuses me for not telling before. It wasn't my fault. I thought sure they'd leave her off. I wanted to get even with Chester before I went, but now it is too late because when this is found I will be dead.

"I don't wish Chester's wife any bad luck, but I want her to know that I had him first and he would be loving me yet if he wasn't a white-livered weakling that listend to his mean old father. I hate weak men. So she is welcome to him. I sure got over my love for him.

"This is written on the eighth day of May, and I hope it will be good and legal without a witness.

"Signed:

"Marguerite Spinney."

Mr. Allan's voice was resonant and ringing to the last word. When he had come to the end he folded the paper carefully, and returned it to his pocket.

All four men looked at Cathie. She tried to speak. Failed. Tried again, and managed one word. "Dead?"

Gordon Moore nodded. He answered her in another word. "Opium."

Drawn by NELL BRINKLEY

Cars have a seat for Love - but he sits behind, and the poor Lover is busy Sleighs had a place for Love but where are the sleighs?
airplane no better tho' love drives his clients are goggled
I'd rather ride in a Caleche in Quebec with Love up in front! There's Romance!

A small voice crying in the wilderness of the exceeding wilds of the early thirties of the twentieth century, crying, "Is there a seat for Love? For the dear little boy who seems to go on living and wanting to be along, though the times are not verra sen-tee-men-tal!"

Let's add up on two or three fingers now, and see about this "just a bit of a seat for Love" in the way the world gets about. You see, the clever ones are saying, with a snap of their fingers to let you know that they do' not care, that Love is in the same boat with poor dear old Santa Claus, that only a few believe in him at all, and that there is no place for him in nineteen-thirty. When you list the conveyances, it looks so, I'm admitting.

The CAR. Well, of all places, say the young bloods, it seems to them there has been room in them for Cupid to go along! Yes, in the rumble seat, with the driver very busy with the wheel if he would keep up with the restless world. And if he is parked under a dark pine tree, then Love didn't even come along most times. Just "petting" isn't even a speaking acquaintance of Dan's.

A PLANE. Not much better; or, even worse! Often Demoselle sits in the front seat, Monsieur in the rear—and Love stays on the ground. When there is width in the forward cockpit for two, then Love takes the rear and tries to maintain the butterscotch sweetness and temperature of love in the roar of wind, frigid ether, and goggles! He wishes he'd stayed on terra verde.

Don't say anything about the horse—near the big town. Way out near the enchanted mesa—yes. In the Rockies—yes. In the quiet hills of New England—but out! So we'll leave him out. (But yes, there is always another saddle for Love when Jean and Jack go riding on the beautiful live thing—a HORSE.)

SLEIGHS. THERE was a place, a seat, for LOVE. In a bear-skin laprobe, behind silver bells. Love drove; and the Lady and the Lover had miles for soft words, promises, sighs, laughter, and kisses. But you have to tour a longish bit of a way to find a sleigh to ride in, with that spare seat for ancient Love.

However, in this swift world, too hurried to plan a seat for Love, I found last year, something still left with the grace of other times, where the spirit shut its eyes and dreamed—had TIME, if you please, to dream—where there was room for just me—or you—and the one I—or you—love; and up in front an extra seat beside the coachman for Love. Time and room for Love? A CALECHE—in Quebec—in the red and gold autumn time! Too bad we can't start the institution of the caleche just for lovers to ride in. A good brown horse, fat with oats, the gleam of silver and the tang of a bell on his harness. The gentle bob-nob of the high seat. The fur robe under and over, with the hand you love in your muff with yours. Rain-bow dyed goat-hair for your feet and the driver's seat. Yellow wheels going round and round. Love and Pierre Souci up in front. With a stop for marmalade and tea! Ohh.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Tell It to Sally

A Great Deal of the Time 'Pride' Is Only a Nice Name for Vanity

Are you "proud?"

Too "proud" to admit you've made a mistake, even though your eyes are blind with unshed tears and your heart is wrung with longing for the joy you've lost by that mistake?

And are you letting life drift by your empty hands because you're too "proud" to say you're sorry—too "proud" to be humble and happy again?

You are? Then you'll know the torment Peggy is passing through. And perhaps you'll learn wisdom from her misery.

"Dear Sally:

"I want you to help me, please. You have so many ideas that I feel maybe you can. I have a problem that is breaking my heart all into little pieces, and yet I feel as if I couldn't move, myself, to change it.

"I know you'll probably say that it's all my own fault. And it is, really. You see, when I was in my early teens I met the boy of my dreams—my 'childhood sweetheart.' But during my high school days my parents were divorced and that left me to depend on myself. So I went to work in another city, at housework. So I lost touch with him, but I never forgot him.

"Later, I went to still another place, and stayed with my mother and we both had to work in a restaurant for a living. Finally, I came into contact with Tommy, and I thought that I loved him more than I did my old schoolmate. I was then nearing my 18th birthday and I married him.

"We lived together for nearly two years, and then I told him that I didn't love him and never could. You see I had never really got over caring for the first boy, then. I was sure that Tommy felt the same way about me as I did about him, so we parted and I came home.

"So far I have been successful in business, but I am so blue that I just don't know what to do. And I am puzzled. Tommy has told others that he cared and would always care for me.

"Not long ago I went back to the town where he lived and saw him. And I do still care for him. He is a darling. He came over and talked to me and it just seemed like old times. I wanted him, oh! so much, to ask me to come some time and talk to him alone. Or to ask to come to see me. But he didn't.

"I can see now what a terrible mistake I made. Do you think he will ever come back to me? He did say, after all, to those other people, that he would always care for me. And he doesn't seem to be interested in anyone else.

"What can I do? I would feel so terrible going to him and telling him what a sap I was. Do you think he would think I was crazy if I wrote to him? I do so want him again. And I know now that I never really cared for the first boy. Not the way I cared for Tommy. I was just a silly little fool wasting my time on a lot of imagination.

"But some way my pride rises up in revolt at the thought of telling him so. I am so afraid he'd think I was making a fool of myself. What can I do? I am simply heartbroken.

"PEGGIE."

What can you do, Peggie? Do what your heart tells you, child. For in this case your heart has a thousand times more sense than your head. Your heart tells you that you need each other—that you'll finally find happiness in each other. But your head tells you to be "proud."

But what is this "pride" buying you?

Nothing but loneliness and vain regret. Is it then worth all you are paying for it? There is a pride that is worth all it costs . . . a fine pride that keeps us from doing ignoble things. And even though such price demands a heavy toll from us, it gives us beautiful dreams in return . . . and makes life a glorious adventure. But your "pride" gives you nothing in return but futility. For it isn't real pride at all. It i only crabby conceit.

So put aside this silly vanity that you have called pride . . . this horrid fungus growth that is consuming your life . . . and go out and find happiness again. Have the courage to be honest and humble with this man you love! Have the courage to say you were wrong! Dare to put yourself away and reach for a new self, a new life, a new love.

And if, even then, you don't get him back?

At least you will have gotten yourself back, child. You will have regained your self-respect . . . you will have stopped two-timing yourself. And that alone is worth all it may cost.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

Lillian Reveals to Madge Secrets of Last Meeting With Savarin

"I want to tell you about it all, now," Lillian said, "and then I'm going to seal the pages of that chapter in my life so that they never can be read again. But I want you to know how wonderful Harry has been. It is all owing to him that my memories of Robert will have the fragrance of roses instead of the tang of myrrh."

I made no further protest.

"I fancy you can guess the lie I told Robert," she said at last. "I intended to be perfectly honest with him, and let him see that it was the same kind of affection I would have given a beloved brother which had brought me to him. But he was so pitifully grateful to me for coming, and to Harry for permitting the journey—so humble in his realization of my feeling for him, and yet—so—so wistful—oh, I can't tell you, Madge, but—I saw his poor tortured eyes as I was leaving him, and I ran back to him. I couldn't bear for him to go out—so thwarted, so—"

Her voice trailed away into silence, and when she began to speak again it was with the voice of an abashed child confessing a transgression.

"So I kissed him—you saw that—and I told him—I told him that I loved him best of all the world."

I drew a deep breath. She indeed had given Robert Savarin a falsehood royal in its magnificence, forswearing both her husband, and the daughter, who, I knew, was the person she really "loved best of all the world."

"Yes, I know," she said as if I had spoken. "Marion, too. But, oh! Madge, if you could have seen the changed look in his eyes when I told him that. It was as if——"

"I'll finish it," I said tenderly as she hesitated, "as if Heaven had opened before him. Surely you're not regretting——"

"Not now," she said, and there was in her voice a little paean of joy. "Because, this is why I wanted to tell you this, Madge—because I told Harry everything just now—I never had dreamed I could—you know how jealous——"

I nodded and put my hand over hers.

"His face was terrible for a second or two." Her voice reflected the agonized uncertainty of that moment. "Then I can't tell you what he said and did—it's too sacred, but he was—divine in his understanding and his chivalry. It was one of the most wonderful experiences of my life.

She threw back her shoulders with the gesture of one shaking off a burden.

"You could not help but think me callous today," she said. "But," ignoring my startled though not entirely sincere protest, "you know me well enough to realize that a wild grief for one man and a passionate love for another cannot exist together in my heart. All my love is Harry's. I went to Robert because of sympathy. I lied to him for the same reason. I was terribly shaken by my interview with him, but I do not love him except as a dear comrade and friend, and my grief for his passing, when he goes, will be nothing that I cannot hide successfully."

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says——

Surely, surely, my daughter, in the millenium, every woman shall be granted all the desires of her heart. For, in this world, her portion is yearning and airy hopes and unsatisfied longings.

But, when the millenium cometh, then will every woman possess the "It" of Clara Bow, the blondness of Marion Davies, the sophistication of Peggy Joyce and the eternal youth of Fanny Ward.

Then will every attractive bachelor be a "marrying man" —and every good-looking married man be "misunderstood."

All a woman's photographs shall be flattering, and all the styles becoming. And every damsel will be "the only woman" in some man's life!

Every man will be wise and clever enough to make money like John D. Rockefeiler—and foolish enough to spend it like a Broadway playboy.

Double chins shall be no more and banting shall pass away. Verily, in all the world, there shall be no such thing as spinach! But whipped cream and chocolate sundaes and French pastry shall be included in every reducing diet.

Yea, every woman shall possess a school-girl complexion, a school-boy figure, a roguish smile and a pair of come-hither eyes.

Every lover will have an original line; and, for him that repeateth the same blandishments to two women in the same evening, the punishment shall be death at sunrise.

Love shall cease to be a matter of uncertainty, marriage shall cease to be a matter of chance—and divorce shall cease to be a matter of course.

No man shall keep a woman waiting, and no woman shall be held responsible for her husband's sins or his digestion or his follies, even as it hath been, since Adam first said "Cherchez la femme!"

All husbands shall be prompt for dinner—but slow to give advice; and no bridegroom will have to be braced for his wedding and dragged to the altar.

Every man will know how and when to kiss a damsel, without insulting her vanity or damaging her permanent wave—and when to REFRAIN from kissing her.

neither boredom, nor heartaches, nor yesterdays in a woman's life.

For, every party will be a triumph, every love-affair a real romance, every man a new conquest, and every day will leave her looking a day YOUNGER!

* * *

Then and then only will a woman be Perfectly Happy. And, if this be only a dream, I pray thee, do not wake me up!

Horoscopes

Sunday, October 26

Sunday's horoscope holds splendid indications of the advancement and expansion of all mystical, cultural and singular or unorthodox projects, with recognition or preferment from those in places of position and power.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a flourishing year in all mercantile, literary or unusual adventures.

A child born on this day should be unusually endowed for adventures in unusual lines and should succeed and win honors or preferment in employment or in literary occupations. Secret activities may also engage its attention.

Monday, October 27

Monday's astrological forecast is a rather unfavorable one since hostile forces seem to be dominant. There may not only be much agitation and stirring about, but affairs generally may be subjected to postponements and frustrating circumstances.

Those whose birthday it is may not be surprised to encounter many obstacles, delays and frustrations during the year

A child born on this day should be given early and rigid training in self-restraint and amiability, as its entire career may be spoiled by rashness, aggressiveness and restlessness.

Household Hints

Kerosene will remove rust from scissors.

A handy bed lamp for the guest room will be appreciated by the restless house guest.

Powdered camphor, sprinkled on the book shelves occasionally, will keep the books in good condition.

Cretonnes washed and then rinsed in water in which rice has been boiled will retain their original stiffness.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hostess at Bridal Shower

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

A claims that it is proper to give one's sister a bridal shower at their own home. B says it is all right if the sister giving the shower is married and lives in a different house than the bride-to-be. Will you please settle this argument for us?

In Doubt.

If the sister is planning to give the shower, she should give it at her own home, in which she is the hostess, as she is of the party.

Thanking One's Hostess

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Whom does one thank for a lovely time at a Sunday tea given by a sorority?

2. At such an occasion is it necessary to wear a hat?

G. A.

1. The hostess, or the hostesses, should always be thanked when we leave a party.

2. Yes, it is in better form to wear a hat at tea.

FLEEING BANDIT KILLS OWN PAL

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 25.—(AP.)—An excited bandit fleeing from a residence here after he had robbed a woman of $285, shot and killed a man who police believe was his companion in crime.

The bandit, who escaped, entered the home of Mrs. Jennie Moore, and at the point of a gun obtained $285 which she had on her person. As he left, he was confronted by John T. Hays, a roomer at the home. The holdup man switched off the lights and struck Hays, knocking him down. Police said they believed the bandit, running from the house, saw his companion on the steps in the darkness, and not recognizing him, opened fire.

SEEK DAMAGES FOR ORPHANS

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 25.—Damages of $130,000 are sought in a suit filed by the Dollar Savings and Trust Company of Pittsburgh against Sam Marcus, of 1130 North St. Clair street, Pittsburgh, and Gerald Martin, of Washington, Pa., as result of a fatal automobile accident November 12, 1929.

The trust company is acting as guardian for Erwin, Genevieve, Norman and Delores Szafraniec, minors, of Meadowlands, children of a man and wife killed in the accident near McClovern. A car in which the couple was riding was upset in a collision with one driven by Marcus. A moment later, in a dense fog, Martin, it is charged, drove his automobile into the wreckage. Marcus and Martin are charged with negligence.

Farm Hand Held As Slayer of Five

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 25.—(AP.)—George Dwernychuk, sought by police as the slayer of five persons on a Smoky Lake farm, 80 miles north of here, was captured at Vegreville after a two-day search.

Police said he ran amuck with a shotgun, slaying Mr. and Mrs. John Walanski, his parents-in-law; their daughter, Mary; Mrs. Walanski's mother, Mrs. Helen Huchalck, and a neighbor, John Darichuk. Four of the victims were killed outright and the 74-year-old grandmother died later.

3 McKees Rocks Men Held in Dry Raids

Three men were arrested in two raids by prohibition agents in McKees Rocks yesterday.

John J Stillerich, 51, and Thomas Evans, 58, were reported arrested at 128 Bell avenue, where home brew and moonshine was reported seized. In the other raid, at 330 Helen street, George Matovich, 29, was arrested, agents said.

Railroad Legion Post Dinner Tonight

Fall from Hayloft Fatal to Farmer

ALIQUIPPA, Pa., Oct. 25.—Stricken with apoplexy, Frederick Schmidt, 66, New Sheffield farmer, was killed in a fall from the hayloft of his barn to the floor, the coroner's office reports. Schmidt was born in Germany. He leaves five sons.

OIL SUIT VENUE CHANGE DENIED

A change of venue was refused by Judge Frank P. Patterson in Common Pleas Court on the petition of E. N. Gillespie, defendant in the suit brought by David L. Lawrence, Democratic county chairman, to recover contributions to a pool in Guffey-Gillespie Oil Company stock.

Lawrence, for himself and associates in the pool, obtained a verdict of $95,810 in April, 1929, and a new trial was later granted Gillespie. Lawrence's associates included the late State Senator John P. Harris, State Senator James J. Coyne, James P. Mulvihill, L. R. Goshorn, James Houlahen and others, according to Gillespie, who charged that a fair and impartial trial could not be obtained in Allegheny County because of their political prominence and wide acquaintance.

The pool was formed in the latter part of 1919 and $70,000 was contributed by Lawrence and his associates. The anticipated rise in the stock never occurred and the pool contributions were lost. Lawrence's suit sought recovery of the contributions, averring that the agreement to purchase the stock outright was violated by Gillespie in buying on a margin.

FETE TO MARK RADIO DECADE

A banquet, celebrating the world's first radio program, which was broadcast from Pittsburgh 10 years ago, will be held in the William Penn Hotel Monday night by the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. A. W. Robertson, chairman of the board of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, will be toastmaster. James Francis Burke, counsel for the National Republican Committee, will be the principal speaker.

Amos and Andy, nationally known radio artists, will attend in person. The entertainment will be supplied by the Westinghouse ensemble and a grouping of their band and orchestra, the Westinghouse mixed chorus and the duo, "Twenty Fingers of Sweetness."

J. Oliver Riehl, chairman of the Chicago division of the National Broadcasting chain, and Chauncey Parsons, tenor, both Pittsburghers, who took part in the first broadcast, will be present.

DAIRY TO SPEND $500,000

Expansion of the Liberty Dairy Products Corporation, which will include erection of new buildings and other improvements at an expenditure of $500,000, was announced by Paul E. Reinhold, president and general manager. Work will begin within 30 days, Reinhold, in making the announcement, said:

"We feel that this move will help solve the unemployment problem, in keeping with the ideas expressed by President Hoover and many national and local leaders."

The improvements include a new building on the North Side to cost $240,000, additions and improvements to the Shadyside plant costing $150,000, and interior remodeling of the downtown plant at Forbes and Boyd streets at a cost of $100,000.

Reinhold recently returned from Cleveland, where he attended a dairy convention. Many new ideas in dairy construction will be embodied in the new buildings here, he said.

Seeking to relieve the present unemployment situation, the Sun-Telegraph has thrown open its want ad columns to the home-owners of Pittsburgh and other more fortunate individuals who will be given an opportunity to aid those out of work and at the same time see many odd tasks accomplished.

If Sun-Telegraph readers need their walks repaired, roofs, spoutings or porches fixed, plumbing renovated or repaired, coal put in or gardens and flower-beds made ready for the winter, wall paper cleaned, windows washed, or wish their car washed and polished at home, they can give aid to the unemployed by notifying this newspaper.

If you can offer work of any kind to any one, whether for a day, week or indefinitely, and the job pays a salary or wage, call Grant 5400 or stop at Want Ad Corner, Fifth Avenue and Market Street, and the Sun-Telegraph will run a "Help Wanted" ad free of charge.

Any job which you thought you might do for yourself, but for which you never found time, will give a less fortunate individual a chance of employment.

DAILY TRUE STORY

'The Fall Guy'

"Hick" Nelson knew that they called him a "fall guy," and he knew well enough that a "fall guy" is a sucker, an easy mark, or what have you for adjectives in that line?

Hick's baptismal name was Gregory.

He had had a comfortable home until he was 18, when his father died and left him to shift for himself. At that time he was Gregory Nelson.

It wasn't until after he had failed to make good in a number of unimportant jobs, due mostly to the fact that he wasn't a very husky youngster, and had drifted into the "Loop Gang," that he acquired the nickname of "Hick."

This was because he so ably followed instructions of Bardy Torrelli. Hick wouldn't have had the brains to think up schemes himself. He had learned that he could make easy money and, to him, satisfactory money, working with the gang, so he allied himself with the crowd.

Torrelli had to hide away in the sticks after a murder-car episode. He sent for Nelson. Torrelli and two pals had Nelson dress like a hick, or, in circus and carnival parlance, like a "rube."

Becomes Prosperous

Nelson did this so well that many a sharper with circus and carnival would pick him out for a sucker. Nelson managed to display money—it was phoney money, but it looked real enough. The crook would start laying plans to fleece Nelson and suddenly find himself held up by Torrelli and his pal and robbed of his real coin.

Nelson was always called "Hick" after that.

Back of this gang was "The Man Higher Up." His name wasn't mentioned by any of the Loop Gang. It was either "He orders" or "Boss says," or perhaps "The Big Noise wants." They all knew who that meant. It meant the Honorable Conrad Ringman, prominent politician, lawyer and supposedly gentleman sport.

When, to his way of thinking, he became prosperous, Hick arrayed himself in his ideal of sartorial elegance and set out to find Susie Connister. He remembered her when they went to school together. Her father had a tiny delicatessen shop.

Connister told Hick Susie was away working in some hotel, making big money, and that occasionally she came home. After a while Hick found her when she dropped in to visit her father. In Hick's eyes she was more beautiful than ever—flashy as to dress, garish as to make-up, and, to anyone except simple-minded Hick Nelson, an open book.

Introduced to Boss

Hick took Susie over to the Green Grotto. They were dancing when Con Ringman dropped in with some notable politician or one of those queer reasons no one may fathom, Con Ringman fell for Susie. He knew at a glance just what she was, but he fell for her. A waiter whispered a word to Hick and he went out in a back room. Ringman sauntered out.

"Fetch her over, introduce me," Ringman ordered.

Con danced with Susie. His political friends remarked that he knew his politics and stood in solid by being nice to her sort now and then. As a matter of fact, Ringman dated Susie during the dance, a date that was kept about an hour after Hick took her to her rooms and left her—outside.

One night, when she was with Ringman, Susie told him that Hick Nelson wanted to marry her.

"It's a scream," she said.

"It's a wise move—go to it. I'll have plenty for Hick to do out of town whenever we want him out of town. I'll stake him to a present and you can get good quarters."

"Well, I'll try anything once, even marriage," Susie said.

Hick was proud and happy when he married Susie, and the "Boss" made him a present of "ten grand" to furnish a swell apartment.

For quite a while they got along seemingly very happily together. Hick had a lot of "work" to do out of the city. Sometimes he took mysterious code messages to some city a thousand miles away and would have to be gone a week, never suspecting the code message read, "Keep this Fall Guy about a week before sending back a phony answer in code."

About a year of this and there came the Dawson gang scrap. Hick was driving a car. Pete Lacosta was hit and fell against the door, which opened and let him fall to the street. Hick stopped the car under fire, picked the wounded Pete up, put him in the car and drove away.

"Only a so-and-so fool would have done that," Ringman said. As for Pete Lacosta, he worshiped Hick after that.

Pete had the oriental valuation of women, and so, in what he believed to be true friendliness, he said to Hick: "Why don't you chuck that moll of yours and quit being a fall guy?"

"She's not my moll, Pete, she's my wife."

"Jees!" said Pete.

Hick wanted to know the "why." Pete told him all about the Big Boss and Susie. Hick said: "You're crazy!" But he laid low and found out that Pete was right.

"I'm going to bump the Boss," Hick told Pete.

You won't last a day. Just chuck her and forget it."

"I'll get square—watch me."

"You can't—never," Pete warned him.

Plan Works

About this time a flagpole sitter managed to get a job to sit atop the flagpole on the Snyder Building.

Opposite the Snyder Building was the Yancy Building, where Con Ringman had big private offices. The flagpole sitter could look across into Ringman's office windows.

Hick Nelson loitered in a window of the Yancy Building. Two men were with him. One day the flagpole sitter used a white handkerchief! Heretofore his handkerchiefs had been blue.

Hick and the two men went up three flights, broke into Con Ringman's offices, found Susie Nelson with him and then he, Hick, grinned at Con.

"You're married and got three kids. It's going to make swell reading, this pinch. You can get out right away, but you can't keep it out of the papers, my divorce suit naming you, and my suit for a million bucks' alienation of the wife's affections—the Honorable Conrad—"

"You'll be bumped before dark," Ringman said.

"Sure—but it won't keep the pinch out of the papers."

"Tell him to go to so-and-so, Con," Susie cried.

"He's gone there, socially and politically, and in the estimation of his wife and kids—high school kids they are—"

"Hick," Ringman said, "pick up your marbles. You've got me. How much?"

"Telephone for a hundred grand—have it brought here by one man. If two come they'll be bumped. If it isn't here in one hour, you're pinched.' Hick told him.

The cash was there in 30 minutes.

An hour later Hick's two fake detectives quit guarding Ringman and Susie and went away, for by that time Hick was well out of the city.

Today Hick is no more. His name is Gregory Nelson, the quiet American who has the pretty little home and the pretty little French wife—the home facing the ocean in the south of France.

Now and then Nelson's name is mentioned in the Loop Gang, but while they wonder where he is, they never refer to him as the "fall guy."

WITH FRISBY IN DARKEST AFRICA

Picture shows favorite Congressman with intrepid camel described in today's installment. The camel went seven days without a drink, while Frisby claims to have gotten twenty-one miles to the gallon!

By Horace Walpole Frisby.

WARNING—We caution the public against unauthorized accounts pretending to give complete account of my trip through Africa. These works are being sold from door to door by Frisby's enemies and contain more than 2 per cent benzoate of soda.

SPECIAL NOTICE—My installment next Saturday will be a biting, blistering, blasting condemnation of the tsetse fly. Only those who know the energy, zeal and fire of my message can possibly appreciate the treat that is in store for them.

CONFIDENTIAL OFFER—I want solicitors, full of ginger, to sell copies of my book from door to door. Big money for live wires!

CHAPTER IV.

Owing to lack of time and space, after making the special announcements, Chapter Seven must necessarily be cut to the bone. Indeed, I will go further and state that Chapter Seven must be omitted altogether. This economy will help conserve the pulp supply, and it is better that all of us suffer a little inconvenience than to see the trees, mighty monarchs of the forests, needlessly depleted when Chapter Seven can just as well appear in next Saturday's issue, thanks to a merger with Chapter Eight, which will really be Chapter Seven, although, for the convenience of those who are keeping a file of this splendid story, Chapter Seven will, of course, be designated as Chapter Eight.

Yours truly,
HORACE FRISBY.

The New Air Line

First Airplane of New Transcontinental Service Visits Pittsburgh Today—Other Brief Comment.

A new epoch in transportation opens for Pitts- burgh today with the arrival of the first airplane of the new transcontinental service. National, state and city officials are taking part in the inaugural exercises, which is appropriate. Many Pittsburghers, even of those who still look askance at the idea of flying, will be making journeys by this new service within a few years. They can help to maintain the service, in the meanwhile, by sending letters by air mail.

Pittsburgh's ideal situation as an aviation center is again brought to the fore by the announcement that still another air line will operate out of here. Regular daily service between Pittsburgh, Huntington, Portsmouth and Cincinnati will be started next Saturday.

In one of his speeches Thursday Gifford Pinchot, Republican nominee for Governor remarked that the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, a subsidiary of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, was charging 25 cents for a 10-cent bus ride. Mr. Pinchot may have been in error in giving the value of the ride as 10 cents. Some developments have just come to pass which suggest that five cents is, perhaps a fair rate.

The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, which operates in many parts of that state, announces a reduction in the fare on all its bus and trolley lines to five cents. The reduction was voluntary, and was prompted, the president of the company says, by a desire to aid business recovery.

The chairman of the New Jersey Public Utilities Commission had something to say on the matter which is worthy of the attention of our Public Service Commission and also of the Pittsburgh Railways Company. He wrote, prior to the announcement of the reduction, that a five-cent fare, in the commission's judgment, would stimulate riding and favorably affect earnings.

Pittsburghers, paying 25 cents for a bus ride even though they go only a block, and ten cents for a street car ride, will, it is feared, be more disposed than ever to call the local tariffs an imposition. They will want to know why, if bus and trolley companies in New Jersey cities are so confident of making money with a five-cent fare that they voluntarily establish that rate, our Public Service Commission hesitates to give Pittsburgh a reasonable bus fare.

"Go by street car" is a slogan that will be found sensible by those who are adopting it today in connection with attendance at the Pitt-Notre Dame football game in the Stadium. With every available inch of seating space sold, the capacity of the great amphitheater is too small for all wishing to attend this gridiron struggle. Thousands motored into Pittsburgh this morning from distant places, even as far away as Cleveland. These thousands were added to the usual Saturday expansion of automobile traffic caused by suburban residents who drive to the city to make purchases. Street car riders escape a lot of annoyance encountered by autoists.

The largest parking place in the city—the Monon- gahela wharf—always is completely occupied by cars by 9 o'clock any Saturday morning. The thousands of strangers in town today have made the traffic congestion unusually bad. Pittsburgh residents are accordingly helping themselves and also the visitors if they are giving them the right of way and riding to the Stadium in street cars instead of driving their own cars.

Col. Samuel Harden Church asserted in a radio address Thursday night that the Blue Law has been the direct cause of throwing three of the leading hotels of Pittsburgh into insolvency. But business considerations, while important, should not be emphasized in the campaign for repeal of the antiquated Sunday legislation, because there is another consideration that is much more important—and that is the happiness of the great mass of people who are deprived by statute of the right to enjoy harmless amusement.

The only prison term that Joe Aiello, notorious gang leader assassinated in Chicago Thursday, ever served was in Pittsburgh, where he was sentenced to 60 days in jail in 1918 for picking pockets. Unfortunately, we cannot point to this and assert that Pittsburgh is an unhealthy place for gangsters, for the many unsolved racket murders that have occurred in Pittsburgh during the last few years prove only too conclusively that gangs just like those of Chicago and New York flourish here, too. Ours are just a little less spectacular—that's all.

The subject of life insurance trusts is brought prominently to public notice by the announcement that 400 underwriters, representing most of the life insurance companies operating in the Pittsburgh district, are taking a course of instruction on trust functions. A life insurance trust is an arrangement under which the proceeds of a life insurance company are entrusted to a bank for management. The value of such an arrangement has been emphasized by the shrinkage in the value of estates made up of securities.

Pick up a contemporary novel, or attend a con- temporary play, and you will run the risk of being insulted with vile language which no one would have dreamed of printing or uttering on the stage a decade or two ago. The demoralizing effect may be seen in the use of profanity by women. We welcome signs of a reaction. At the Eucharist Day observance at Forbes Field two weeks ago 75,000 Catholic men pledged themselves not to use profane or obscene language. And now it is announced that 25 upper classmen at Lebanon Valley College have been suspended from classes in connection with a campaign against swearing and other vices. Prudishness is not admirable, but there is a vast difference between prudishness and dislike of foul language.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

Tough on the Reds

We can't see what pleasure the New York Reds get out of fighting the police. They call the mounted coppers Cossacks, yet they seem to be fond of hoss-racing on foot.

First of all, every officer carries a hickory baton that he ain't leading orchestras with. If you want to be caressed by a wand you should consult your fairy godmother.

In the recent world series in City Hall Park the Reds did all the fielding and the police did all the batting.

We concede the right of free speech. But when there is a kid winding up a slingshot it is dangerous to tweet even on a bird sanctuary.

An officer thinks as much of his clubs as any golfer. They wax 'em and twirl 'em like mustaches in Paris.

You may think that there is no technique in parting a client's hair. But there is plenty.

After a good old family picnic in the public parks, the officers go back to the clubhouse for a rubdown and a shower. Meanwhile, the Reds are making themselves turbans out of antiseptic gauze.

No riot will ever be fair until both sides are wearing badges.

The contest is as lopsided as the heels on a bowlegged hobo. Reprinted by request. So far we haven't heard any complaints that the gamblers are fixing the referee.

We make these statements without permission of the Federal Radio Commission. Sport is sport but we don't think the playful Reds will ever live to hear an officer say: "Now it's your turn to chase me."

Until that Utopian time arrives with all on board we advise the Redsters to avoid personal huddles and to telephone their decisions in.

Standing on an open-face soap box isn't so good either. You're safer in a spot where you can gallop downstairs.

We have seen all the riots on the Atlantic seaboard as a civilian observer. When they're choosing up sides we want to be in the grandstand.

Even at that we got clipped over the whiskers by an officer who had an ear for music.

After a couple of tattoos he stopped whacking us. He knew we were a Republican because our skull didn't give out the right sound.

Isn't It So?

Forget yourself and other people won't.

Many a bachelorship has been wrecked on a permanent wave.

Lots of people never get anywhere because they spend all their lives trying to trade places.

MATTHEW FONTAINE MAURY

By Archibald Henderson

Within recent years, recognition has at last been accorded, in full measure, to one of America's distinguished scientists. His proudest title was "Pathfinder of the Seas," the title of the excellent biography by John W. Wayland. During his lifetime he received distinguished honors, not only as a scientist, but also as a great benefactor to the world. His contributions to maritime trade and navigation were almost incalculable. The War between the States came at a time in his career to shadow his fame, and to leave him in the backwaters of remembrance. By countless thousands he is remembered today as the author of a series of geographies widely used 30 to 40 years ago.

Some 12 miles west of Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania County, Virginia, was born Matthew Fontaine Maury, on January 14, 1806. Before his fifth year, the family removed to Williamson County, Tennessee, some 18 miles southwest of Nashville. After studying at Harpeth Academy, where he likewise served as instructor, he received an appointment in the United States Navy. For some years he visited many parts of the world on various cruises. His active mind busied itself with a pressing problem; the sea paths which ships ought to follow. The problem obsessed him, and he began to accumulate information and data from many sources.

Early in his career, he began to contribute scientific articles to periodicals, which attracted wide attention. In 1836 he published a valuable work, "A New Theoretical and Practical Treatise on Navigation," which was reviewed by Edgar Allan Poe, and adopted by the United States Navy. He made a useful contribution to navigation by his invention of an instrument for finding the true lunar distance. Throughout his life he gave public lectures on scientific subjects, and advocated important advances in scientific public service. In 1840-41 he contributed a series of valuable articles to the Southern Literary Messenger, which were very popular and widely read. These articles advocated far-reaching changes and reforms in the American Navy.

Maury's world-wide fame dates from his appointment as superintendent of the Depots of Charts and Instruments of the Navy Department, which afterwards was known as the National Observatory, later still the U. S. Naval Observatory and Hydrographical Office. After five years of study, and the accumulation of data, he published an epoch-making chart; "Wind and Current Chart of the North Atlantic," in 1847. Prior to that time, navigators had largely "gone it blind," so far as winds and ocean currents were concerned. The University of North Carolina in 1847 made him a Master of Arts, and five years later conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Maury was a pioneer in advocacy of supplying the farmer with information about the weather. The Weather Bureau, as eventually established, carried out the views of Maury on sanitary meteorology.

Maury's work in charting wind and ocean currents was revolutionary in its effect upon navigation everywhere. They increased the speed of navigation enormously. It is estimated that, by following the paths mapped out by Maury, the American merchants and shipowners at that time saved $2,000,000 a year, those of Great Britain $10,000,000 a year. In 1853, a great conference on navigation problems, called by Maury, met in Brussels. The effect upon world commerce was beneficial in the highest degree. Maury was deluged with honors, was made member of many learned societies, awarded numerous gold medals, and even had orders of knighthood conferred upon him.

In later life, he made various other contributions to science, and wrote many books. But his greatest achievement was a Pathfinder of the Seas:

Of ocean paths the tangled clue
He taught the nations to unravel,
And showed the track where safely through
The lightning-footed thought might travel.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

You can't help people.

You can't mold their lives for them.

And why should you expect to?

Even a turnip has a right to do its own growing.

Why shouldn't a human be allowed to do the same?

Yes, I admit, some of them go at it all wrong—

They're dumb, silly, extravagant, infinitely exasperating.

But that's THEIR business, not yours.

That is literally their business—

The most important business they have—

The business of learning how to live:

And no one can conduct that business for them.

You may want to—you may think you can.

You may insist upon trying to direct their lives.

And they may seem willing—

But even if they are willing, it can't be done.

Sooner or later they will slip—

Back into their own scheme of things—

BECAUSE THAT IS REALLY THE ONLY SCHEME OF THINGS FOR WHICH THEY ARE FIT;

THAT'S AS FAR AS THEY HAVE DEVELOPED.

AND IT'S QUITE USELESS FOR YOU TO TRY AND YANK THEM UP—

UNTIL THEY'RE READY TO GO OF THEIR OWN ACCORD.

And how much needless trouble.

They cause themselves and others!

Yes, that's true—

But those mistakes they make.

Inconvenient as they may be to society.

Are as important a part of THEIR business of living.

As their occasional successes.

Indeed, we often learn far more from our mistakes

Than from our successes.

And the right to make a fool of yourself.

Is actually just as sacred

As the right to make a saint of yourself.

Of course, we can't let people run hog wild

Or be smashed for lack of a helping hand.

And it's all right to give that helping hand

If you can do it in the right way.

If you'll undertake charity

As you would any other risky adventure,

Determined to take its chances like a game sport.

Not expecting any particular returns,

Just doing the thing for the love of it—

Then it's all right to help people to help themselves.

For that's exactly what charity should be—

An adventure in brotherly kindness.

But if you only want to meddle and mold

The other fellow over, after your pattern,

And if you expect him to go around

Drooling with gratitude, because you've done so—

THEN HANDS OFF.

For you'll not only grab yourself off a lot of grief.

But you'll deserve it.

YOU HAVE NO MORE RIGHT TO PUT YOUR BRAND ON ANOTHER'S SOUL THAN YOU HAVE TO PUT IT ON HIS FLESH.

And that's something that even the dumbest soul

Instinctively realizes.

Why aren't people grateful?

Why does the dog so often bite the hand that feeds him?

That's why—

BECAUSE THE FEEDING HAND

USUALLY DEMANDS A QUIT CLAIM DEED ON THE PUP'S LIFE

IN RETURN FOR THE CHOW.

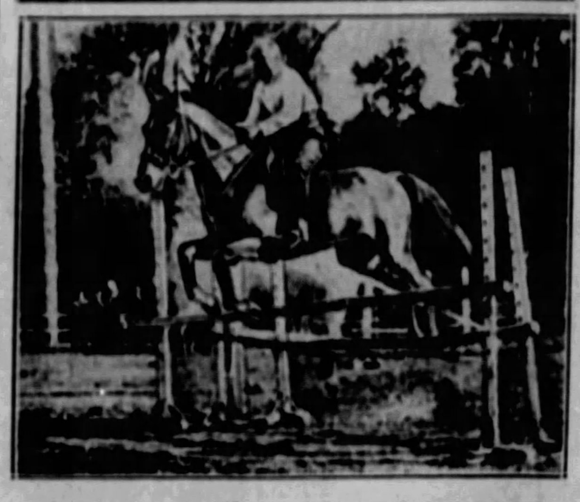
Mussolini's Health

He Wants People to Know That It Is Good.



IL DUCE JUMPS FENCES FOR THE REPORTERS.

One day, according to rumor, he is about to undergo a dangerous surgical operation. Next day you hear that the operation has been performed weeks before and kept secret.

It is important for the ruler of Italy on whose leadership his followers depend to be looked upon as a strong man.

In this picture you see Mussolini on one of his favorite horses jumping over a hurdle—two of them, in fact, one before the other—to convince newspapermen in the background that there is nothing the matter with him.

Reporters who saw the jumping reported that the Italian dictator kept his hands in the right place, sat close to his saddle and showed not the slightest apprehension or nervousness.

Considering his weight, which has increased of late, the performance was a good one.

Still, the question comes constantly in mind.

AFTER MUSSOLINI, WHAT?

Who will have the strength to carry the load that he has been carrying and the will-power to push plans to completion?

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 25.—I stopped in New Orleans for a day, homeward bound from a hasty trip to Texas. A friend at whose grave I have just visited loved this city next to his native Houston. A half dozen years ago we explored it together and today my wife and I lazed back over old trails.

New Orleans is one American city preserving the sweeping charm of its antiquity. The old city, or French Quarter, continues to weave a romantic dream of a swashbuckling past. Ancient porticos span narrow sidewalks, and mellow mansions that stood more than 200 years ago stand untouched.

Only the inhabitants change. The Creoles springing from that proud mixture of Spanish and French blood have almost vanished. To the quarter swarmed Italians and a sprinkling of Negroes. But architecturally it is intact. Even the Old Absinthe House and Antoine's have withstood the carking tooth of Time.

The old city is so tightly stuffed with tradition that in its magic every little side alley becomes a boulevard and each forgotten patio a glade. There is an ecstatic ring to the street jangle, and even the winds, soft and amorous, seem to swirl in a passionate adagio. New Orleans was fashioned for poets and love.

Too, there are convents with high-walled gardens, the old slave market, graceful cathedral spires like white fingers pointing upward, and always fragrance of blooming flowers. So rapturous is the illusion it was a shock upon quitting the section to come upon a gentleman in plus fours smoking an American cigaret.

If I give impression the whole of New Orleans lives in the past, that is not the intention. Its main business artery, Canal Street, rivals famous thoroughfares of the world. More than 160 feet wide, with an electrically lighted mall down its center, it suggests the Champs Elysees and Unter den Linden.

In newer sections there is a touch and go. Only the old city nods and that is as it should be. Irvin Cobb, who accompanied us here, took off for Paducah in an aeroplane, his usually florid face chalk white and wreathed in the sickest looking smile ever hatched outside a comic paper.

Our guide, a touring car chauffeur picked up at random, proved to be the most intelligent of his guild I ever encountered. His last name is Whittaker and when you visit New Orleans ask for him of a Roosevelt Hotel starter. The city to him is a religion and he loves it with a sublimated frenzy. He was the sort to express horror over a rusted 17 century iron fence recently suffering a coat of fresh paint. "They have utterly ruined it," he said, with a quiver in his voice.

* * *

New Orleans is a paradise for antique prowlers. There seems to be block after block of nothing but shops of this sort. If you like antiques—and I wouldn't give a plugged nickel for a dray-load—the best bargains in the world are said to be here.

* * *

This city was hewed out of the Louisiana jungle swamps, once a veritable miasma, yet its mortality rate is low. Due to marshlands, cemeteries are above ground and caskets are not placed in earth but in stone crypts. The ancient and more modern burial grounds are featured in all yap wagon tours of the city.

* * *

In the most unexpected place one comes suddenly upon startling beauty. In a dank and musty hallway along a mean looking street hung a crystal chandelier which had the sheen and delicacy of glistening raindrops on cobwebs. A philanthropist saved it from marauders, specifying it must hang in its original place. It might easily be stolen, but it isn't. New Orleans has that sort of civic pride.

We passed through a smoldering sort of shambles, once the famous New Orleans cribs at the tiny windows of which painted and wicked ladies beckoned the roystering passersby. The ladies have gone the way of that famous local cocktail which I cannot spell but begins, I think, with a Z.

Three different telephone callers at the Roosevelt insisted they were relatives. And at the depot a little shaver toddled over and addressed me as "Uncle." Another 12 hours here and I'll have more kinsfolk than a Belgian hare!

I have never been in Thomasville, N. C., nor heard of it until I saw it from a train rushing north today. But it is a place where some day I'd like to live.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

There are times when the struggle for existence becomes tragic.

Burdens press down till they all but crush life and ambition.

Discouragements sap hope and despair follows.

Your desire for a position of less worry and fewer demands is answered by more bitter disappointments.

You long to give up your place in society because it is so hard to keep up with its demands.

Your pride is going and you have little interest in what you do or in what others think of you.

You are not ashamed of your weakness—of your lack of womanliness or manliness as the case may be.

You are too tired of it all to be ashamed of anything.

You'd like to end it and forget that by so doing you become the biggest coward of them all.

Others have passed through just as many and as serious experiences as you and have been thoroughbreds enough to stand not to be swept with the current.

Don't lose faith for it is always darkest just before a bright day.
